"PUSSYFOOT" JOHNSON RECEIVES RIDE ASTRIDE PLANK THROUGH LONDON

Bobbies Rescue American Prohibition Worker After He Is Taken From Meeting and So Roughly Handled by Medical Students That It Is Necessary to Dress His Injuries At Police Station Before He Is Able to Go Home.

London, Nov. 13.—William E. Johnson, an American prohibition worker and Anti-Saloon league organizer, familiarly known here and elsewhere as "Pussyfoot," was dragged from a platform from which he was speaking, severely beaten and paraded through two miles of crowded West End streets on a plank.

His assailants for the most part were medical students, and against them at times he put up a strenuous fight, receiving a badly damaged eye and other injuries, so that finally, owing to his weakened physical condition, he was obliged to submit to the indignity.

Rescued by Police. Eventually Johnson was rescued by the police, who during the early part of the march, simply kept the crowd moving. He was rushed to Bow street station, where his injuries were dressed, and he was then able to go home.

The occasion of the attack was a meeting in Essex hall just off the Strand, at which a debate had been gathered under the auspices of the Overseas club and Patriotic league between Mr. Johnson and R. Mitchell Banks, a lawyer, on "The How and the Why of American Prohibition."

The chairman of the meeting was F. A. McKenzie. He, too, was seized by the crowd, but was soon released. The meeting had no sooner opened than there was an uproar, due to the activities of a few young men, who immediately engaged in heckling, both prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists pleading for order.

Signs of Trouble. Outside the building there were potent signs of impending trouble. A crowd of students had gathered and after Mr. Johnson began to speak, hundreds of the students, who evidently were organized, broke down the iron gates to the entrance to the hall, brushed aside the police, charged down the aisles and seized Johnson and McKenzie. These two were pelted with bags of flour. They hoisted them into a wagon and proceeded to King's college nearby, where both were invited to state their case for prohibition to the students, but were not allowed to proceed because of the howls.

Mount Johnson. The rioters then discarded McKenzie and mounted Johnson on a plank. This a stalwart group platted on their shoulders and marched through the Strand, Covent garden, Leicester square, Piccadilly circus and Oxford circus to Portland street, where the police intervened and effected a rescue.

As the procession passed through the streets with banners adorned with black cats, pictures of beer steins and other decorations, there were frequent cries of "We've got pussyfoot," but Londoners, accustomed to students' marches recently, did not really believe that it was Johnson and the march did not cause as much excitement in the streets as might be expected.

Some of the prohibition campaigners, mostly Americans, declared to the Associated Press that they did not believe that the police had made a sincere effort to break up the crowd and contended that they could have rescued Mr. Johnson much sooner if they had so desired.
