MEET DECEMBER 2 TO FRAME NEW CONSTITUTION

Several Candidates Mentioned for President and Secretary of Constitutional Convention.

Lincoln, Nov. 16.—(Special.)—Two weeks from the coming Tuesday the constitutional convention for which delegates were elected recently, will gather in Lincoln for the purpose of agreeing upon a new constitution for the state, which will be submitted to the voters at the next regular election.

The most interest just now appears to be directed toward the organization of the convention. Already several candidates have announced their willingness to serve in the capacity of president of the convention. Among them are John Healy of Fairbury, member of the state senate in 1913; W. A. Sells of Lincoln, a member of the 1911 senate; C. C. Flansburg of Lincoln, E. L. Pollard of Nebraska, former congressman from this district and a member of the house in 1897 and 1891; A. J. Weaver of Falls City, and Charles L. Saunders of Omaha. The latter has served in the senate in the years 1903, 1905, 1907, 1913, 1917 and 1919. He was president of the senate in 1907 and acted as governor during his term while both Governor Sheldon and Lieutenant Governor Howell were out of the state at the same time.

For secretary of the convention there are two candidates so far, Clyde Barnard of Table Rock, who was several sessions chief clerk of the house and secretary of the senate three sessions, and Will Hitchcock, chief clerk of the house at the last session. Because of his experience and acquaintance with the work, most of the men who have served with him in legislative sessions, appear to favor Barnard. However, Hitchcock is said to have the backing of some well known men.

There may be other candidates for the presidency to appear before the session convenes, as there are some pretty strong men composing the membership of the convention.

So far most of the delegates who have come to Lincoln appear to think that the session ought not to last long. They think that the old constitution is a pretty good document and that if it is pressed up to meet the present conditions that it will be about all that ought to be done. There appears to be a strong prejudice against in any way making the constitution a legislative document and that the functions of legislation should be left to future legislatures.

TRACING FIANCE IN AN UNUSUAL LOVE MYSTERY

Romance of Brooklyn Girl Fades With Fake Death Report—Cannot Find Phantom Lover.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—Following an intangible clue in the quest for the phantom bridegroom who was to have married Miss Sophie Loderhose of Brooklyn, detectives have come to Chicago. They are looking for a man who calls himself Dr. A. William Hoffman, jr.

The romance which has involved the names of Miss Loderhose and Dr. Hoffman is one of the most mystifying that detectives have had to work on in many days. It involves love and death. But those working on the case are convinced now that the reported death message was a hoax.

Gets Telephone Call.
Miss Loderhose, who is 24 years old and said to be beautiful, might be able to give more assistance than she has except for her collapse following the disclosure that her mysterious fiance was not all he claimed to be. She is under the care of a physician in her home in Brooklyn.

Dr. Hoffman claimed Pasadena, Cal., as his home, and the Vincent Astors as relatives. He said that his father was a practicing physician in Millbrook, N. Y. All arrangements for the wedding had been finished and the young doctor was supposed to be on his way east for the event. Then came a telephone call to Miss Loderhose, saying he had been killed in an automobile accident in French Lick Springs, Ind.

Was Telephone Courtship.
Announcements of the accident appeared in the eastern papers. Then it was learned that there had been no such accident at French Lick Springs, that there was no Dr. Hoffman, sr., living in Millbrook, and no young one in Pasadena.

Although the preparations for the wedding were extremely elaborate, the courtship was mostly a long distance one. Young Dr. Hoffman appeared only three times at the Loderhose home. He was seen only by Miss Loderhose and her sister, Miss Emily, who kept house together. He was dressed each time in the uniform of an officer in the medical corps of the army. One time he brought his supposed father along. The young women insist that the bearing of the two was in harmony with their contentions.

Lasted an Hour.
But the telephone calls which Miss Loderhose received were almost countless. Her fiance called sometimes from Pasadena, she said, and sometimes from Millbrook. Some of the conversations were so long that they lasted an hour, but the young doctor seemed to care nothing for telephone calls. He claimed to be rich. He was to present a new organ to the church where the wedding was to take place, and an organ company had begun work on the plans.

Miss Loderhose was showered with expensive gifts. She came in nearly every day. She wore a four carat diamond ring. Shortly before the wedding day, she sent out invitations and a notice to the newspapers. She was the guest of showers and pre-wedding entertainments.

Put on Mourning.
Then came the announcement of the accident. Another mysterious telephone call, which Miss Loderhose thought was from French Lick and the young man's father told her of the sudden death. The girl put on deep mourning and asked the minister who was to have married her to hold a memorial service. While getting information for that, he discovered that there was no Dr. Hoffman living in Millbrook, and the girl's relatives began the effort to solve the unusual love mystery.

Miss Loderhose had a photograph of the young doctor by which the detectives hope to trace down the elusive lover. She described him as "very tall, handsome, medium complexioned and slender."

Three Bandits Stage Holdup, But They Get Nothing in Attempt

Three armed hold up men shot at a pedestrian at 3:00 Sunday morning at Eighteenth and Leavenworth streets when he ran after they had ordered him to throw up his hands. He reported the matter to the police but they weren't interested enough to take the victim's name. The officer believed the man said he lived at 809 South Nineteenth street.

The pedestrian was passing the George Cott Chemical works at Eighteenth and Leavenworth streets when the three men leaped out of the darkness and "covered" him with their pistols. The victim said he started to run toward town and one of the bandits began "clocking" his revolver and running after him. When the chase had progressed half a block toward Sixteenth street a shot was fired.

Three armed white men held up three pedestrians near South High school at 9:30 Saturday night but received no valuables for their efforts. John B. Alter, Fifty-second and S streets, Arthur Hopkins, 4407 South Nineteenth street and George Pott, 4404 South Twenty-first street, were the three victims. The bandits rummaged through the pockets of their victims but failed to find any money or other valuables.

The police believe it was the same trio that held up William Bennett, 4722 South Twenty-first street at midnight at Twenty-fourth and I streets and robbed him of $2.

AT THE THEATERS

"OH, LADY, LADY" brings to Omaha a group of merry-makers hitherto unknown to us, but with whom we are glad to become acquainted, having in mind other delights in days of old. It doesn't matter especially that the material used for the foundation of the evening's entertainment is more or less familiar, through continuous employment. It is the superstructure in which most interest is felt, the trimmings, decorations and the like. And there are light and graceful, rocco, almost bizarre at times, but always pleasing. And let us bless Jerome Kern for a score containing nothing but music—no jazz, no tinkles, no "tinning," just melody, moving always with the spirit of the song or dance, increasing enormously the enjoyment of the evening's entertainment with the composer. Messrs. Bolton and Wodehouse have embellished the fabric of a somewhat commonplace book with such wit as not frequently exudes from even the smartest of musical comedies. In fact, "Oh, Lady, Lady" deserves all that was said in praise before its arrival.

Of the company quite as much may be set down in commendation. In Betty Blye, we have a new type of soubrette, Omaha's own "Fainting Bertha" in polite company, while Florence Auburn, blithe and buxom, stands over against her the perfect specimen of sophisticated femininity, the ingenue, so charmingly typified by Pauline Barri. Madeline Grey as the austere, cynical and entirely "wise" mother-in-law-elect, sends over her barbed reflections with perfect poise. Then we have Joseph McCallion in an unknissed bridegroom role. Billy Gaston as a well-bred butler, Mr. Fixit. Eugene McGregor as Spike Higgins, ex-burglar and present valet, Walter Grey as a "silly ass" detective and Thomas Leary as a combination janitor and elevator man—a quintessence of comedy as might be asked.

And how this outfit can dance and sing, and how the chorus works to keep up the tempo. The description may be overdone, so to speak, but the Boyd this week and enjoy the best thing Comstock & Elliott have so far sent us.

There are several real hits in this week's bill at the Orpheum, and altogether it is an exceptionally well-balanced and meritorious program of vaudeville.

Carlton, Sobel and Chester are known as the "Ja-Da Trio," and it may be said that by any other name they would be just as pleasing. They were shipmates in Uncle Sam's navy during the war and they are now on the high seas of popularity. Their high seas of popularity when the opening audiences clamored for more of their clever line of entertainment. Mr. Carlton's own song, "Ja-da," was one of their hits.

Carl J. J. J., distinguished tenor, sang several grand opera selections and then "I Hear You Calling Me," and "In Longing for You," in response to enthusiastic encores. It is rare that vaudeville audiences are privileged to hear such a wonderful voice as that of Mr. J. J.

Will J. Ward and his five symphony girls was another distinct hit of the program. Vera Correll, Vera La Rue, Marie Fay and the Melodyettes, a quartet of charming young women who assist Mr. Ward with their singing, dancing, playing and comedy. The playing of five pianos in unison made everybody sit up. The closing number, an Irish song and dance, was well received.

George Kelly, late star of "Finders Keepers," won favor with his one-act, "The Flattering Word," in which he is aided by a company of capable entertainers. The dialogue is breezy and witty. John Regan and the Lorraine sisters have a pleasing repertoire of dance numbers. Ray Saxon, a word while as a monologist. The Belgium duo, two men, and a woman, have a startling acrobatic act in which the woman displays unusual physical development. Topics of the Day and Kinograms are the usual screen offerings which go to make this week's bill one of the best of the season.

Cantor's minstrels, featuring Marion Gibney and a sextette of "purple lady pirates," heads the bill at the Empress for the first half of the week. The offering more than makes good at the opening on Sunday, the performance on a variety of wind and string instruments, together with the singing and dancing of the girls, showing their remarkable musical versatility in a most impressive way. It is a fast and snappy act and most enjoyable. "Honor Thy Children," a comedy by Clara, a Lippert's pleasant comedies, is effectively given. Hugh Johnson amuses and mystifies all by his tricks, and Tom and Perle Almand make their songs go good. The proto-play feature is "Vagabond Luck," in which Elinor Fair and Albert Ray are presented.

A Mack Swain comedy, "Outing Chester" and Pathe News complete the bill.

A thrilling, sensational play, "For the Defense," acted by Richard Bennett and his notable company of players, will be the Thanksgiving week attraction at Boyd's theater. The engagement begins Monday night and there will be a special matinee on Thursday. "For the Defense" is by the author of "On Trial" and it is said that he has duplicated in this play the unusual quality which he displayed in creating the first great success, John D. Williams made the production which is a guarantee that no detail has been neglected.

"The Sporting Widows," a musical burlesque of pretentious scale, is the attraction on at the Gayety theatre, all this week, headed by Al. K. Hall, well known for his qualifications as a fun maker; June Le Veay, prima donna, with a voice that is truly remarkable; Chas. Mack, Billie McCarty, Gladys Everett, a dashing soubrette; George Weist and Ed Aiken, a trio of laugh-makers and a chorus of twenty gleam dispellers. Ladies matinee at 2:15 daily all week.

PALMER ASSERTS EMMA GOLDMAN NOT U. S. CITIZEN

Government Soon to Attempt to Send Her Back to Russia Where She Was Born.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Replying to a senate inquiry as to what had been done toward deporting Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman, Attorney General Palmer declared tonight that the woman's claim to American citizenship was "fallacious," and that Berkman, by his own admission, was an anarchist.

The Goldman case is under consideration by immigration authorities at New York and the attorney general's statement was taken to mean that the government soon would attempt to send her back to Russia, where she was born.

Age Barred Naturalization.
Discussing Goldman's claim to citizenship, Mr. Palmer said she was 24 years old when her father was naturalized and that her age barred her from inheriting naturalization rights from him. The fact that her husband obtained his citizenship through fraud, Mr. Palmer added, cancelled any claim she might have established through that source.

The ramifications to which the plots and plans of the group of anarchists, headed by Emma Goldman, have extended were reviewed by the attorney general. Declaring that both Matthew Schmidt and David Kaplan, who are serving prison sentences for complicity in the destruction of the Los Angeles Times building, were members of the Goldman clan, he showed also that she advocated violence and had incited riots as early as 1893, when she was sentenced to serve one year on Blackwell's Island after indictment on these charges.

Assassin Influenced.
Mr. Palmer included in the statement a transcript of the confession of Czolgosz, who shot President McKinley, in which he told of the influence Emma Goldman's teachings had exercised on his life. Further, he said, the confession proved that he had not only heard her speak, but frequently had consulted with her as to methods to be employed in effecting the destruction of the government.

The connection of both Berkman and Emma Goldman with the bolshevik movement also was emphasized by Mr. Palmer. The activities of the Union of Russian Workers, said to be one of the most dangerous organizations in America and against which the government has directed a vigorous campaign, has been traced directly to the Goldman-Berkman propaganda headquarters, he said.

Alleged Highjackers Are Held for Theft of Beer
Julius Harris, 18 years old, California apartments, and De Los Ehlers, 17 years old, 621 North Nineteenth street, were arrested at 3 Sunday morning and charged with breaking and entering, when, according to the police, they broke into a home at Forty-second and Pine streets and stole two bottles of beer. Two companions, the police said, escaped in an automobile.

The car carrying the escaping boys struck in the mud near Hickory and Forty-fifth streets, but by the time the police could find their way down into a hollow in which the car was stuck the boys had freed their car and were driving east on Center street at a high rate of speed.

Harris and Ehlers, police say, told the names and addresses of the boys who accompanied them.

bandits. The Shadow, portrayed by Joseph W. Girard, is known and feared throughout America as the master criminal of the country. Hildreth, a young Englishman, is sent to America to receive the famous Arabian jewels, but the Shadow has planned otherwise. He almost accomplishes his purpose, but the strange fascination which Morn Light, the little musical comedy actress, holds for Hildreth, guides the young Englishman to safety. As Morn Light, Ora Carew, a former silent beauty, justifies her sudden rise to dramatic fame by her capable handling of the role. The picture will continue to be shown at the Moon for the first half of the week.

Mabel Normand, the rampish little comedy star, will appear at the Muse theater today and Tuesday in her new picture, "Upstairs." The little star is seen as the molder of jangly ice creams in the cellar of a palatial home. She wears boy's togs, a rakish cap and boots far too roomy for her "tiny feet." "Upstairs" is a picture that people of all walks of life will enjoy.

She was found starving on the streets of New York and was picked up by mission workers. From then on her life was as full of excitement as anyone would care for. The story of this girl's life and that of a gentleman-burglar forms the plot foundation of "Virtuous Sinners," one of the most astounding photodramas ever produced. Wanda Hawley and Norman Kerry are the stars and the picture was shown to an interested audience at the Brandeis theater Sunday for the first time. It will continue its run at this house up to and including Wednesday evening.

DIMPLED KNEES AND BARE LEGS SHOCK MINISTER

Withdraws Support From Benefit Where Young Girls Show Their Limbs.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—A sensation was caused in Port Chester when it became known that the Rev. Harry B. Heald, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal church, the most exclusive in the village, had requested that his name and that of Mrs. Heald be stricken from the printed list of patrons and patronesses of the benefit of the Woman's club tuberculosis fund.

The meager costumes worn by some young women in the parade prompted Rector Heald's action. In a statement he said:

"I am entirely in sympathy with the Woman's club in the work it is doing for the prevention and relief of tuberculosis. There is, however, at the present time a menace to the welfare of our nation much more subtle and destructive and far more difficult to combat than bodily sickness and disease. That menace is the lowering of the high ideals and moral standards of womanhood manifested by the tendency toward extremes in dress, which are both immodest and immoral."

Among the patrons are several officials of Mr. Heald's church, another clergyman and his wife, and some of the best known men and women of the community.

Sleeveless, low cut costumes, with skirts reaching only to the knees, worn by young women in "Vanity Fair," and dimpled knees and about six inches of bare limbs displayed above them by sixteen young women participating in a Scottish drill caused the trouble.
