Coming

Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson will give Shakespearean readings under the auspices of the Society of Fine Arts, Wednesday, November 26, at the Fontenelle hotel. This English actor of note has achieved success both as Shakespearean characters and as a painter. Forbes-Robertson, born in London, son of J. Forbes-Robertson, the eminent art critic and journalist, was educated at Charter House and in France, and also studied painting at the Royal academy. He came to America the first time in 1885 with Mary Anderson, and with her played the roles of Pygmalion, Romeo, Orlando, Ingomar and Claude Melnotte. Later he joined Sir John Hare in "Tosca," "Lady Bountiful," and other plays, and then returned to Irving's production of "Henry VIII."

In 1900 he married Gertrude Elliott, who had been a member of his English company for a year. She has since taken leading roles in almost all the plays in which he has appeared both in this country and abroad, and won great success. He was knighted by the king in 1913.

So great has been his success as an actor that comparatively few people recall his talent as a painter. His original purpose was to become an artist, and with this in view he studied for several years in the Royal academy and in France at Rouen. He was commissioned by Irving to paint the famous church scene from "Much Ado About Nothing." This notable work of art was bought by the Players club of New York, and now hangs in the club house where it is annually shown to thousands of the admirers of both actors.

New Method Removes Superfluous Hair Roots!

Have you "tried everything" for that annoying hairy or fuzzy growth and about given up in despair? Well, there's just one thing more to try, and you must try it, because it is the one home treatment that reaches the very root of such troubles. The new process is not to be compared at all with depilatory, electrical or any other method you've ever heard of. It is different because it actually removes roots and all—you see the roots with your own eyes. Just get a stick of phelactine from your druggist, follow the simple instructions, and you will be delighted with the result. Phelactine is odorless, non-irritating, and can be used with entire safety—you could even eat it with impunity. It is an instantaneous method.

MOVIE ACTRESSES AND THEIR HAIR

Did it ever occur to you that every movie actress you have seen has lovely hair, while the most popular count their curls as their chief beauty? In fact, many are leading ladies just because of their attractive looks. Inquiry among them discloses the fact that they bring out all the natural beauty of their hair by careful shampooing, not with any soap or makeshift, but with a simple mixture by putting a teaspoonful of cetrox (which they get from the druggist) in a cup of hot water and applying this instead of soap. This full cup of shampoo liquid is enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. After its use, the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. The hair is so fluffy that it looks much heavier than it is, its luster and softness are delightful.

War Work and Fresh Air Gave British Women Big Shoulders

By FLOYD MACGRIFF, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Nov. 22.—The English beauty is broad-shouldered, London's fashionable tailors have discovered. This is due to war work. Fresh air and exercise, which hundreds of thousands of British women enjoyed for the first time in their lives owing to outdoor work in which they supplanted men, have developed such women physically.

The sylph-like, angular and sometimes elegantly slender type of British beauty is mostly a war memory. The petite type has become rare. Now the full-busted, broad-shouldered beauty stands for the typically English girl. Four years of loose-fitting garments altered slim women as regards waist, expression, hips and bust.

To confirm the tailor's verdict, a Daily Chronicle representative, sex un stated, visited a famous swimming club for women. A few semi-dressed women admitted war had made them muscular. Lifting heavy weights, which would have been a difficult task for them before the war, was now easily accomplished; some of them have become proficient at driving motor cars, whereas before the war they hadn't either the nerve or strength to do so. The club's consensus of opinion was that the women had lost flesh, while their proportions had increased by breadth and muscle. And several stood up to prove that contention.

Seaside bathing resorts report that women with medium-sized figures before the war now require a size larger bathing suit, and often the larger size suits are all taken, while a line of women clamor: "This suit's too tight!" Tailors have observed that the rather inelegant war costumes have tended to make the English women, never noted for her trimness, even more negligent of her attire; that she is less fussy than before the war, and that she prefers to wear tailor-made suits rather than the more elegant and flimsy costumes.

"Merely get a box of Orlex powder at any drug store. It costs very little and no extra to buy. Dissolve it in 4 oz. of distilled or rain water and comb it through the hair. Full directions for use and a gold bond guarantee come in each box. One box will last you for months.
