Hastings Woman's Club. The members of the Hastings Woman's club entertained their husbands and all the teachers of the city at a play at the high school auditorium. "The Kettle Sings," the play presented last spring by the dramatic department of the Lincoln Woman's club, was given. Going to the theater? Look over the amusement ads.

CLUB DOM

LADY Johnston Forbes-Robertson, better known, perhaps, as Gertrude Elliott, sister of beautiful Maxine, and herself a charming woman, accompanied her husband to America when he came here a few weeks ago for his American tour of Shakespearean lectures.

"Just to keep track of Sir Johnston," she explained. Nineteen years ago the romance of the great Shakespearean exponent and the beautiful little American actress found its consummation in marriage. Those who know the Forbes-Robertsons intimately bear witness it is as fresh in their hearts, as fragrant as if it had bloomed but yesterday.

"I want you to see the picture of my four daughters," volunteered Lady Forbes-Robertson in a recent interview in New York City. "Quite a crowd, aren't they," she smiled. "This one, our first, is in school just outside Paris. Her drawing is full of promise. She is taking up painting seriously, and has already won honors. She loves a good time. I get glowing accounts of girlish escapades in the school. My husband says so far as he can discover the purpose of a young lady's finishing school is to give the young ladies a perfectly hilarious time."

Gertrude Elliott's artist daughter is as like her mother as the second pea in a pod. "She is even more like my sister, Maxine," declared the mother. "She has my sister's build, tall, more generously proportioned than myself. Our second girl is so much like her father in looks and manner she is really funny. Take this picture of her, for example. I have a picture of Sir Johnston as Romeo that could easily be mistaken for this very photograph."

"She is born to the stage, loves it, has loved it since she was a tiny tot. I'm afraid I will not be able to keep her out of the theater." Asked if she objected to the theater for her children she said: "Certainly not. I will be proud, happy, to have our daughter follow in the footsteps of her father. We do not urge our children to any line of endeavor. They must choose for themselves. Having chosen, we will do our best to guide and counsel them wisely."

Lady Forbes-Robertson says her husband declares he will never again put grease paint on his face. "But this feeling is not contagious," she hastened to say. "I am just as happy in my work as ever, and he is just as happy in his work as when he, too, was playing. Retiring from any work must be a matter of individual decision. It is the privilege of the worker to go on with work until he or she feels the call to stop. Any other course would be easily selfish and unjust. It could not make for happiness."

Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson will lecture on "Shakespeare and His Art" in the ball room at the Fontenelle hotel at 3:45 p. m. Wednesday, under the auspices of the Omaha Society of Fine Arts. His lecture will be illustrated by selected readings.

Important Questions. Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: I am coming to you to find out your ideas on a few questions:

I wish to know if when a boy and girl go to a cafe for a little "feed" who should do the ordering? Also what is something nice to order when going to a cafe after a movie or dance? I do not want to take up too much room, but just one more question: If a boy makes a date for an entertainment and when he calls to go who should suggest leaving the house—I mean when it is time to go to the entertainment—the boy or girl?

I would like to see this in print soon. Thanking you for your trouble. I WANT TO KNOW.

The boy should do the ordering after due consultation with the young lady on a question of such importance as a "feed." A sandwich with chocolate or coffee is a favorite order for such occasions as you describe. Add a salad if you like. If you don't care for foods so substantial, ice cream in some form is quite an acceptable choice. When it is time to leave for an entertainment, the girl should excuse herself to put on her wraps. In other words, it is the girl's move. The boy made his move when he called as an escort, and thereafter he awaits his lady's pleasure.

Titian-Haired Blonde. Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: Please tell me when a couple become engaged if the gentleman gives the girl a ring, is the girl supposed to give the boy a ring, too, or does he get both rings if he cares to wear one? Also would like to know what would suit me best, as I have light red hair and kind of red in my face? Thank you. X. Y. Z.

The girl is not supposed to present a man with an engagement ring. Some people like to exchange wedding rings, but whether a man wears the plain gold band or not, is a matter of taste. Browns, blues, black and white, and greens are good colors for auburn-haired people. Reds and pinks are dangerous colors, though a soft shade of pink may be very stunning on a "Titian" blonde—if she is pale—but I wouldn't advise a red-faced girl to try it.

Cousins. Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: As you seem able to answer all kinds of questions, I will try to pose my curiosity satisfied, too. What is meant by second and third cousins? Is it right for such relatives to marry? Thanking you in advance and hoping to receive an early reply in The Bee, I am yours truly, PERPLEXED. Your second cousin might be your parent's first cousin, or your mother's cousin, for instance, is your second cousin. Third cousins are too far apart on the family tree to be given much consideration—whatever they are. It is decidedly unwise for even second cousins to marry, although some people risk the health and mentality of their progeny in so doing.

Grateful: The only safe course to pursue with regard to moles is to consult a good beauty parlor operator. They can remove them for you.

Fashion Dispatch

(By Fairchild Fashion Service.) Deauville, France.—(Special Cable to The Bee.)—The leather coat is meeting with tremendous success here. Leather-trimmed dresses are also the vogue. Even gettette frocks are leather-trimmed. Beige and maroon are popular colors at this watering place, which is at present crowded with chic people from both America and England. Prices at the hotels are exorbitant, but all rooms are taken. Restaurants and cafes are crowded and money is freely circulated.

(By Fairchild Fashion Service.) Paris.—(Special Cable to The Bee.)—A great many American buyers have sailed, many not waiting for the Callot and Cheruit openings, which were as usual the last to be held.

Prices are exorbitant and buyers complain of the difficulties in obtaining anything really novel. Prices for both millinery and dresses have advanced over last season, but reports are that in spite of the prices, orders have been heavy.
