

THE OMAHA BEE DAILY (MORNING)—EVENING—SUNDAY. FOUNDED BY EDWARD ROSEWATER. VICTOR ROSEWATER, EDITOR. THE BEE PUBLISHING COMPANY, PROPRIETOR.

You should know that Omaha terminal elevators have a combined storage capacity for more than 12,000,000 bushels of grain.

- What The Bee Stands For: 1. Respect for the law and maintenance of order. 2. Speedy and certain punishment of crime through the regular operation of the courts.

May your Thanksgiving be a happy one! It is up to Carter Glass to let us know whether McAdoo was telling facts.

Turkey may be out of your reach, but the land supplies a lot of other things good to eat.

Little need to caution people against overeating today; the price-fixers attended to that.

Nebraska's fire record is mounting too high. More care will save a lot of money to property owners.

Thirty inmates of a Denver gambling house were robbed, but the dealer was not in on the play—masked bandits did the job.

If that Lake Superior storm had not extended its jurisdiction quite so widely, Nebraska would have been just as happy.

Lloyd George is interested in the dry law reception in the United States. He ought to come over and try to get "a bit of bitter."

Occasionally a police judge shows he has a heart, as witness the discharge of the woman accused of stealing coal to keep her sick babies warm.

If one of those Paris dandies were to walk down an American street in his new costume, he would be taken for the advance agent of a patent medicine show.

Striking steel workers are getting back on the job wherever there is coal enough to keep furnaces going. One of these at a time is enough for any country.

Coal operators would like to know what business Mr. McAdoo had to stick in just at this time. Lots of people are equally curious, but the fact remains he started something.

Labor members of the British Parliament ask a raise in salary, not being able to keep up appearances on their present stipend. Thus the high cost of living has its effect even on the purest of patriots.

It must be annoying to Dudley Field Malone that "Ambassador" L. C. A. K. Martens should disclose details of a little business transaction, in the course of which $1,000 was paid over to the great reformer. But one is hardly expected to live on the salary paid the collector of the port of New York these days.

Hoover Prophet of Good. It is Mr. Hoover who is credited with saying that within a few months time prices will drop 25 per cent. Hurrah for Hoover! will be the cry of the optimist. But he is an easy fellow to convince. The pessimist will ask to be shown. Mr. Hoover may have some figures and facts up his sleeve. He may also have some inside information as to the federal measures.

THANKSGIVING. It matters not which of several versions of the tradition as to the origin of Thanksgiving Day may be accepted as nearest accurate; the feast is one of peculiar importance. Coming to us as a heritage from the Puritans, it has lost little of its earlier and higher significance.

A nation on its knees is one to be respected. God-fearing men founded our government and have preserved it, and, under His providence, it will endure because its people have not turned away from the faith or the worship of Him.

Government and the Coal Situation. Whatever settlement of the miners' wage dispute may be reached by the president's cabinet, the question of its enforcement looms above all others.

The government came into the case under the assumption that the extraordinary powers granted the president to carry on the war still are vested in him. When the injunction was issued by Judge Anderson, Acting President of the Miners Lewis announced proposed acquiescence, saying dramatically: "We are American citizens, and cannot fight our government."

The settlement of a considerable part of the miners is voiced by Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois district, who said: "I am tired of waiting Dr. Garfield's pleasure, and running down here every fifteen minutes." Mr. Farrington might with profit reflect that the public is also getting somewhat weary of his antics.

Los Angeles and the Air Lanes. One unflinching asset on which the people of Los Angeles should pride themselves is their representative in congress. Mr. Randall may get his wires crossed on matters of internal policy, may miff certain of the great world questions, and may even deserve some criticism for his course in general, but when it gets down to matters that affect Baja California, he is there like a duck.

Two years ago he started to uproot the army balloon school and transfer it from Omaha to his home town, and he succeeded in getting considerable support from army officers. A training school was eventually established at Arcadia, nearby the congressman's starting point, and that experiment was the best thing that could have happened for Omaha.

Similarly, Congressman Randall is now eager to divert the air mail route, so that Kansas City and Los Angeles will be the principal termini, instead of Omaha and San Francisco. He has missed again, but deserves credit for trying.

It is not Omaha's fault that it offers superior facilities to Kansas City, or that Los Angeles lies so far south of Tehachapi. In good time a branch service will fly from San Francisco over the mountains to deliver mail to the City of the Angels, just as Kansas City will get its relayed from Omaha.

Yet we may commend the persistency of the Southern Californian in congress, who tries to get everything in sight for the home folks, while we congratulate Omaha on having a representative who is on the job and can head off such raids as that engineered by the ambitious Randall.

Felipe Angeles, Mexican Patriot. Standing with his back to a wall, Felipe Angeles faced a firing squad, the greatest military leader and expert ever produced in Mexico, dying as a traitor to his country.

It cannot be said that there has been any stinting of themselves by those who patronize the savings institutions. Money has been spent liberally for necessities and luxuries in the last four months, and yet bank accounts have grown steadily. It surely would not serve any good purpose in this community to have a period of wretchedness before a national prohibition amendment becomes effective on January 16 next.

The Latest Jenkins Chapter. From the Minneapolis Tribune. Once more the American State department has hurled a challenge at the Mexican government, this time in relation to the treatment accorded to William O. Jenkins, consular agent at Puebla, who was kidnaped by bandits and held under severe hardship for a week as hostage for the payment of a ransom of $150,000.

Manfully a deliberate attempt is being made by the Mexican authorities to discredit Jenkins as a conspirator with rebels in an attempt to stigmatize and belittle the Carranza government. The consular agent denies, with unctious that he was a partner in any such enterprise and declares that he was mistreated not only by the kidnaping bandits, but by the authorities whose business it was to protect him.

This warning is much like the one dispatched to Mexico City last July, following the murder of Peter Catron, an American citizen, in San Luis Potosi, and about a month before two American army aviators were seized and held for ransom by bandits.

The New Industrial Conference. President Wilson's appointment of a new set of conferees to take up the work of the first industrial conference is commendable in purpose and much more promising than the first abortive effort to deal with the most pressing of domestic problems.

Prohibition and Thrift. An increase in savings bank deposits in the four months of July, August, September and October in Minneapolis, seven times as large as the increase during the same period in 1918, is attributed by bankers to the greater thrift attendant upon prohibition of the traffic in intoxicating liquors.

Arbitration and Award. F. P. I signed an agreement as provided for by the statutes of Nebraska to settle a controversy in Omaha with a customer of mine by leading the dispute to arbitration.

Malicious Prosecution. V. D. Y.—Some months ago I presented a case to our county attorney, fully disclosing all the facts. He then had the party arrested. The trial was recently had and the party was discharged for lack of evidence.

TOLEDO TRIUMPHANTS. Toledo is a city where the Moors once held sway. A stronghold of Iberia where reigns the But it is not of that ancient burg that I propose to sing.

Vacating Judgment. H. N.—Some months ago I was sued and I employed a firm of attorneys to defend my case. It happened that one of the attorneys died and the other took sick and a default was entered against me, about two weeks ago.

Guaranty. O. R.—Some time ago I wrote to an Omaha jobbing house that if it would send goods to a certain local business man in our city that I would submit to inspection, remit payment, I never received a reply from the Omaha jobber or had any notice of the shipment.

Workmen's Compensation. B. K.—Is the city of Omaha liable for the death of a fireman who was killed in performance of duty? In other words, does the workmen's compensation act apply to the city of Omaha?

Insurance. W. D. C.—Is an oral agreement made by an agent of a fire insurance company to insure a building enforceable? Answer—It is, but the contract must be definite as to all the material terms of the contract.

Negligence. B. H. G.—Is a street car company liable for a passenger struck by a passing automobile while she is in the act of alighting? Answer—In a recent case cited by the supreme court of North Carolina which is found in 1 A. L. R. 942 it was held that the company was liable where a woman passenger was struck the instant she reached the ground by an automobile speeding at high speed.

Answers. Mother of Two—There is nothing that you can do. P. T.—You should employ a reputable lawyer. P. C.—Your remedy is by injunction. It is necessary for you to employ a reputable lawyer. We make no recommendations.
