

Army Aviator Uses Plane Coursing Over Farm in Civil Life

Chicago, Nov. 28.—The farm is not such a dull place after all. J. F. Bradshaw, a farmer at La Harve, Ill., trundled his airplane out of the barn at 5 a. m., taxied to the stubble field, whisked past the hay loader, zoomed a straw stack and was off. Two hours later he was placing an order for articles he needs on his farm with an implement firm in Chicago.

"Well, I want I must be getting on," Bradshaw remarked at 3. "You know I've got 10 cows to milk and there's a cider press coming tomorrow." He started his homeward flight. As he neared his farm he studied the weather vane on top of his barn so he could head into the wind, and side-slipped in for a fast landing. Ten minutes later he had stowed his air-Pegasus in the barn and was riding nothing more treacherous than a three-legged milk stool.

Seventeen-Year-Old Bride Held as Bigamist

Dayton, O., Nov. 28.—Whether or not Vera Davis Jones, pretty 17-year-old bride, is to be brought back here for prosecution will be determined by the local authorities following the decision of the case against her in Judge Sullivan's Chicago where she was apprehended. Jones has sued for divorce and says he will press the bigamy charge.

A machine has been invented in England to redress worn wooden paving paving blocks at a rate of 1,000 an hour so they can be used again.

Black Cells Help Prisoners To Register Deep Remorse

Winnetka, Ill., Nov. 28.—William N. Peterson, psychology expert and head of Winnetka police department, has been pondering deeply upon the matter of giving the prisoners' cells the proper atmosphere. He has reasoned out that a cell with red roses on the wall, a carpet on the floor, pictures, etc., does not help make the prisoner feel remorseful. Some time ago the chief tried painting the cells grey. It didn't work. It somehow conduced to levity. But now he has hit upon the shade that will bring true repentance. He has painted all the cells with a deep, mournful black.
