

LITHUANIANS DO HARD WORK OF AMERICA

Famous Chemist Tells of Importance of People of This Nationality to the United States.

F. J. Zuris of New York City, who has visited the local Lithuanian colony, lectured on the "Future of Lithuania." He pointed out the opportunities of Lithuania in an address here.

Mr. Zuris is a chemist, formerly of Syracuse university of Syracuse, N. Y. He has been an editor of Syracuse University Cosmopolitan Student. During the war he served as a chemist in the United States chemical warfare service, as a sergeant. After service, he organized the first Lithuanian shoe factory in America, at Brockton, Mass. Now he is with the Lithuanian Development corporation, which is exporting to Lithuania.

"The Lithuanians, who are 900,000 strong in America, and who live among you here in Omaha are 1,200 in number, are very little known to you, yet they dig your coal, dig and smelt the iron in your foundries, fell your trees, clear the lands for new cities, slaughter the cattle and pack them for the market," he said. In a word they do all the hard work. Yet these people, although all peaceful workingmen, they demand, comparatively speaking, high wages and are willing to work for them. This necessarily means a higher standard of living.

"The chief Lithuanian centers in America are Wyoming, Lehigh and Shenandoah valleys, i. e., hard coal regions of Pennsylvania. Here there are over 250,000. The tailoring of New York City and Brooklyn is practically carried on by the Lithuanians. Boston and its cluster of small towns, engaged in production of boots and shoes, are great Lithuanian centers. The well known Brockton shoes are, to a great degree, Lithuanian products. Chicago has 100,000 Lithuanians, who are chiefly employed in packing houses. Your own city has 1,200, whose chief occupation is in packing houses.

"You meet these people every day, work with them and participate in all walks of life, yet you do not know them. The Lithuanians of America have given 40,000 soldiers, purchased over $36,000,000 worth of Liberty bonds and did their bit so that the Americans might aid them when the time comes.

"The Lithuanians come from the western part of Europe. Up to the 16th century Lithuania has been a free country. Its people have lived on Baltic shores from the remotest ages. Tacitus in his works referring to Suedania, Galindae, et Traki (the three chief branches of Lithuanians), refers to them as 'peaceful, hospitable and the most ancient inhabitants of Europe.' Further, he points out that they are 'superior in civilization, for they have carried on agriculture when Helvetii, Gauls and other roving tribes, from which the present Europe sprung, were yet in a primitive stage.'

Two Dozen Quarts of Whisky Brought Carpenter Trouble

Detectives arrested H. B. Kirwin, carpenter for the Cudahy Packing company, at his home, 5131 South Twenty-third street, Thursday night. The officers say they found 24 quarts of whisky hidden in a closet at his home.

In police court Friday Kirwin admitted having the whisky, which he said he bought for his own use. He said he paid $142.50 for 12 quarts and that he had the other 12 quarts left over before the state went dry. The court assessed a fine of $10 and costs and ordered the liquor confiscated and destroyed.

Driver Injured In Collision

Fined $10 for Drunkenness

A fine of $10 and costs was levied upon Ray Overbay, Millard hotel, in Central police court yesterday on a charge of drunkenness. Overbay was arrested last night when a rented car which he was driving collided with another car carrying license number 153489, Iowa, at Twenty-fourth and Harney streets. The driver of the Iowa car drove away.

Overbay suffered cuts about the head and face. The car he was driving was badly damaged.

My HEART and My HUSBAND
Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

What Arthur Walters Brought to Madge.

Despite the assiduous interest in my convalescence which Major Grantland displayed, an interest which never permitted my sick room to lack fresh roasts, he was not the first grown-up masculine caller I had when my fractured rib had healed sufficiently to permit of my walking around downstairs and into the garden. It was a far different sort of man whose card Katie brought to me the first day I was downstairs. She tendered it at the end of her fingers as if it were something that would bite.

An Insistent Caller.

"I'm just tired sweeping dot bunch of soap greens off porch," she said pertly. "He coom every day for two, tree days, say he want see you. I tell him nothings doing till next week, but he coom joost same. Missis Underwood she say bring everybody to her, but he never have time to stay. She ask me what he look like, and ven I tell her she say he probably some young book agent, and tell me to say you never home, he get tired cooming. He never give me dot card before, but he saw you in yard joost now, and say bring dot card to you qeeck. 'Vot I say?' 'Tell hecm get qeeck to help out of here?'

"Katie! Katie!" I reproved, repressing a smile with difficulty, for my little maid's adventures in American slang and mild profanity are irresistibly funny sometimes. "You must not say such things." "I know, I always forget," Katie returned with superb nonchalance. "But you please let me tell dot empty can on front steps joost dis vunce vot I said!"

Her eyes were laughing, her lips pursed and pleading, and I knew that she was anxious to save me the possible ennuui of seeing a persistent stranger. But the name on the engraved card which she had handed me was not strange to me, although I had never seen the man who owned the cognomen.

ARTHUR WALTERS,
Walters, Hines & Gibson,
79 Front Street,
Attorneys-at-Law, Bayview, L. I.

One of the most lovable girls in my class in the Bayview high school bore the name of Esther Walters, and I knew from her girlish comments that this must be the idealized brother, "Art," of whom she had so often spoken. That the young man was a staunch friend of Kenneth Stockbridge I also knew, and my decision to see him was taken in a moment.

"Take Mr. Walters into the living room, Katie," I said with quiet sobriety, the manner which always subdues my voluble little maid, "and say that I will be there directly."

She looked at me shrewdly. "The Sealed Letter." "All right, I feex," she acquiesced, and in another moment I heard her assuring my caller that "Meesis Graham, she coom in double qeeck."

My first impression of Mr. Walters as he sprang up his feet at my entrance was of extreme boyishness, but a second look told me that he was much older than he seemed, that in fact the early thirties were not far away from him if he had not already entered them. But young or old, he was a most prepossessing chap, and with the tremors which had seized me at the sight of the word "attorney"—one to be dreaded in the present state of uncertainty surrounding the mystery of Milly Stockbridge's death—vanish at my first look into the steady hazel eyes of the young solicitor.

"Mr. Walters, I believe," I said, cordially. "I'm Mrs. Graham. I have heard of you often from your sister, Esther." He laughed boyishly. "Not more often than I have heard of you from the same source," he countered promptly. "I only hope her accounts of me are as enthusiastic as those she gives of you."

"They are the last word in enthusiasm," I smiled, and then as we sat down in chairs facing each other I saw that the young attorney's face grew grave.

"I must only detain you a moment, Mrs. Graham, for I find that cause of my friendship for Kenneth Stockbridge I am constantly shadowed. But I have a letter for you from him which he could trust to no one else, and which he insisted that I must deliver only into your own hands. I know nothing of its contents, but I do know that if you are ever asked if I brought you any message from Kenneth Stockbridge you must deny it positively. Say that my business with you was a purely personal one, invent any excuse you please, but give no one an inkling that my friend has ever sent you a message of any sort. You will promise this?"

"Of course," I said simply, but I felt again the shadow of intolerable mystery and crime enwrapping me as I spoke.

Retired Ranchman Dies at Home Here at Age of 76

James M. McCormick, 76 years old, retired ranchman, died Wednesday night at his home, 125 Park avenue. Mr. McCormick had been a resident of Omaha for 35 years and had large land holdings throughout the state.

California Girl Sees Her First Snow Storm Here

Miss Clara Nelson, stenographer in the office of O. B. Holton, United States immigration agent, saw her first snow storm yesterday.

She lived in Riverside, southern California, until recently, when she came to Omaha in the government service.

Miss Nelson paused now and then during her work yesterday morning to admire the snowflakes as they gently fell to earth.

Chamber of Commerce Prepares to Receive General Pershing

Howard Baldrige, chairman of the public affairs committee of the Chamber of Commerce, will have charge of the reception to be extended General Pershing on his visit here. Mr. Baldrige yesterday conferred with W. A. Ellis, assistant commissioner of the chamber, regarding arrangements for the reception.

Mr. Ellis will telegraph an invitation to the general and attempt to ascertain the exact date of his visit here. The only information received is that he will visit Omaha shortly after the holidays. "We will take the matter up with the public affairs committee at its next meeting," Mr. Baldrige said, "and rush plans to receive the general. We hope to get definite information as to the date of his arrival at once."

Continue Hearing of Man Charged With Attack on the Mayor

Nick Fort, charged with assault with intent to do great bodily injury to Mayor Smith on the night of the riot, September 28, faced Judge Fitzgerald in Central police court yesterday. His case was continued until today. Fort's bond was fixed at $10,000. Fort was recognized about a week ago by Chauffeur Russell Norgaard, when he was brought to the police station on a charge of vagrancy. Norgaard, who protected Mayor Smith on the night of the riot, testified in court yesterday that he saw Fort strike the mayor with a gun in front of the Dutch Mill restaurant at Harney and Seventeenth streets.

Several other witnesses testified also. Fort is about 25 years old and lives at 1415 Williams street. He has been in the custody of the police a week.

Frank Walsh Acknowledges Jerry Howard's Subscription
Frank P. Walsh, national chairman of the American commission on Irish independence, in a letter to Victor Rosewater, editor of The Bee, has acknowledged receipt of $100 subscription to the Irish loan, sent through Mr. Rosewater by Jerry Howard.
In expressing his thanks to both Mr. Rosewater and Mr. Howard Mr. Walsh writes: "You will no doubt have occasion to record the Howard spirit quite generally throughout your state in the near future."

Funeral of Dr. B. G. Willis Will Be Held on Sunday
