

LEAGUE WOULD SELL LIQUORS IN CAFES ONLY

Hoping for Defeat of Prohibition, National Association Denounces Saloons and Urges European Custom.

That the National Model License League, an organization which believes in the absolute banishment of the saloon and the sale of liquors publicly in eating houses only, still has hopes that the national prohibition amendment will not go into effect in January, is evidenced by the following optimistic letter being mailed to the liquor trade from its Louisville, Ky., office:

"To Brewers, Distillers, Hotel Keepers and Wine Makers: The elections on the 4th would seem to justify the long-time prediction that prohibition that prohibited would quickly turn a flowing into an ebbing tide.

"Prohibition in the past has been popular because it destroyed the saloon, but did not prohibit. The prohibition that is now before the people is not as popular as those who have their cellars well stocked, but those who cannot anticipate their wants are beginning to reflect. Never in the past was the demand for beer, wine and whisky so immediate and so universal as it is at present.

"Simply explain how whisky, wine or beer can be secured and everyone is an eager listener. That these goods can only be secured in violation of laws gives no concern to magistrates, constables or to the ordinary citizen. Never before did a national statute fail utterly to excite the law-abiding instinct among the people.

Dead Letter Today.

"It is a dead letter today in the minds of the people, and the judge, prosecuting attorney, sheriff, constable and jurymen will soon join hands in defeating convictions. The United States will repeat the experience of Maine. It is possible, however, that constitutional prohibition will not go into effect.

"The votes on the 4th in Ohio, New Jersey, in Maryland and Kentucky show unmistakably that the liberal vote is already stronger than the fanatical.

"Of these elections the one in Ohio is most important. If the supreme court upholds the purpose of the state referendum then the advent of national prohibition is deferred until November, 1921.

"In the meantime the supreme court may decide that the 18th amendment was not properly drawn and is unconstitutional. Such a decision is anticipated by the greatest lawyers in America.

Follow European Custom.

"In the meantime the brewers, distillers, hotel keepers and wine-makers should exhibit wisdom. They should realize that prohibition has been strictly for the serving of wine, beer, highballs, etc., in eating places. With the passing of the saloon, the treating habit will go, and with the passing of the treating habit, drunkenness will disappear.

"Again I say—let the trade show wisdom and let the people be wiser to kick against the pricks."

The letter is signed by T. M. Gilmore, president.

My Heart and My Husband

ADELE GARRISON'S New Phase of "Revelations of a Wife"

How Lillian Underwood "Saved" an Awkward Situation.

In compensation for my rudeness, and my eagerness to banish from Major Grantland's eyes the hurt look which I had brought there, I rose hastily to my feet as I made my little plea for pardon, and laid my hand appealingly, and unthinkingly upon his sleeve.

The next instant I deeply regretted the action, for the officer looked down upon it with a face going white and red by turns, then with a quick little intake of the breath he put his own hand warmly, positively over mine, pressed it against his arm with a swift little passionate movement that startled me. Into his eyes, too, had come something that made me feel for an instant as if I were standing at the crater of a volcano looking into the molten mass below.

There was no mistaking the meaning of either look or action. I knew in that moment, and was deeply abashed and remorseful before the knowledge, that though in all probability I should never be annoyed in the slightest degree by the young officer's feeling, I still had to face the rather appalling fact that he cared for me deeply, intensely, utterly hopeless as he must know his emotion to be.

In the days when we had been so dramatically thrown together in an experience that crowded a whole lifetime of acquaintance, understanding and comradeship into a short time—the days when he had not known, when there was no opportunity or reason to tell him that I was "maid, wife or widow"—I had surmised toward the end of that hospital experience that he was more deeply interested in me than I wished. But he, himself, by his cool, repressed manner, when after investigating the reason for Dicky's strange behavior, he advised me crisply to "trust my husband," had dispelled such a notion. This sudden revelation of his real feeling, so long and so sternly repressed, was a distinct shock to me.

Mrs. Durkee Comments.

Lillian's voice, cool, matter-of-fact, slightly drawing, brought me back to firm ground again.

"Mrs. Durkee tells me, Major Grantland, that we are invited for a drive."

He started as if he had been shot,

Work On New Police Station Starts When Weather Moderates

Work will start on building a new police station and city jail for Omaha on the site of the present ruins at Eleventh and Dodge streets, just as soon as the weather moderates enough to break ground, Mayor Smith and Police Commissioner Ringer said yesterday.

The contract will be awarded next week to Robert Butke, the low bidder at $133,000, said the mayor. "John A. Anderson & Co. will get the heating and plumbing contract; Otis Elevator Co. will get the contract for elevators and Thomas C. Martin Co. are low bidders on the electric wiring."

The total contract without interior furnishings is $163,958.50.

As soon as the contractors begin work temporary quarters will have to be arranged for the prisoners and officers. Commissioner Ringer is considering using the South Side station for some of this work. The detention home or old county jail situated back of the present city jail will be utilized as far as possible in connection with its present uses. Efforts will also be made to get some accommodations at the county jail.

The new jail will be finished next fall.

Applies to Have Wills of Father and Mother Probated

Frank C. Simpson applied yesterday to the county court to probate the wills of his father and mother, Andrew J. Simpson, pioneer carriage manufacturer, who died February 13, 1915, and Mary E. Simpson, who died March 15, 1919.

Mr. Simpson will give all his property to his wife, Mrs. Simpson, first street to Frank C. Simpson and his aunt, Kate G. Grozer, and provides for small gifts to her grandchildren.

My seat, and put the other women into the trolley.

As he climbed into his own seat and the big car glided down the driveway I heard a subdued school-girlish snicker from Mrs. Durkee, followed by a sharp little "Ouch!" quickly suppressed. I guessed that Lillian had silenced Her Fluiness with a primitive pinch.
