Rex Beach Tells Inside Story of His Book Hero

Thrilling Life of Newspaper Man Who Won Back His Health Seeking Death in Insurrectos' Army Made Basis of Famous Novel—Advocates Outdoor Living.

New York, Dec. 13.—If there is anybody who knows from personal experience and observation the value of fresh air and sunlight better than does Rex Beach, author and explorer, that person should surely have a record for travel and study in odd corners of the world. Mr. Beach has lived the life of the natives in such widely separated regions as Alaska and South America, and has seen just what fresh air or the lack of it can do when applied to human beings. Hence he is heartily supporting the campaign of the National Tuberculosis association and its 1,000 affiliated state and local organizations to sell more than $6,500,000 worth of Red Cross Christmas seals before next Wednesday. This money will be used during 1920 to carry out a nationwide fight against tuberculosis, which kills 150,000 persons annually in this country.

The particular feature of anti-tuberculosis work which appeals to Mr. Beach is the insistence on fresh air and sunlight as potent means of preventing the spread of the white plague.

"I have seen how life in the open can rebuild a man," said Mr. Beach the other day. "I have found in the out of the way places such as Alaska and the Mexican border, men who have gone out there because they had tuberculosis and have won back their health. In one of my stories, called 'Rainbow's End,' I used facts which at the time brought me many queries.

"The story dealt with a newspaper man suffering from tuberculosis in such an advanced stage that the physicians gave him no hope unless he should go away to an expensive sanatorium in a high, dry atmosphere. The time of the story was a little more than 20 years ago. Since that period physicians have demonstrated that tuberculosis can be successfully treated at sanatoria in the climate of New York or New England. But at the period of which I wrote the situation I described was correct.

"The newspaper man could not afford to take the treatment advised and he began to think of committing suicide. He lacked nerve. He compromised by going to Cuba and enlisting in the forces of the revolutionists. He hoped that a Spanish bullet would put an end to his life, so he welcomed dangerous tasks of all kinds. As a result he won the title of 'El Diabolo' and the Cubans regarded him as the greatest hero and general all-around daredevil who ever swung a machete. All this took time, however, and the newspaperman was living the life of the insurrectos, out of doors all the time, getting exercise such as he had never known before.

Turns Arrant Coward.

"Finally he woke up to the fact that while the Spanish bullets had consistently failed to end his career he had been winning back his health and strength. As soon as he became convinced he had fought off the white plague his greatest desire was to save the life which had become worth while once again. In other words, he might have been rated an arrant coward although his Cuban comrades still regarded him as 'El Diabolo.'

"That story was based entirely on facts, although the man in the case served with one of the Mexican armies at the time of the Madero troubles in Mexico, four or five years ago. I merely changed the time and the scene. There are many instances—perhaps not quite so dramatic, however—that have come to my attention to prove that open air and sunlight will do wonders in curing a man of tuberculosis. In fact, that is why I want to see the Red Cross Christmas seal sale succeed, because it is the means of spreading education as to the value of outdoor living."

Use Miner's Speeches

Against Nationalization

London, Dec. 13.—Interests which are fighting nationalization are utilizing speeches of miners' leaders and other labor officials, which they hope will act as a boomerang. The following are the names of the addresses by Frank Hodges, miners' secretary, has been emphasized in the London press:

"The miners have a policy. It is a policy which if successful will establish an industry which will be run in the interests of the community, run by the people engaged in it, and will create an example which will be followed by every vital industry in this country until the last stone in the capitalist edifice crumbles to the ground because of the new structure we have built."

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed with Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre at Once.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it falls, turns gray and looks straggled just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with the Sage Tea through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.
