BLAMES H. C. L. OF MEAT ON DROP IN ITS PRODUCTION

Kansas College Professor Declares Animal Husbandry Has Not Kept Up With Growth of Population.

According to Dr. C. W. McCamp-bell, head the animal husbandry department of Kansas Agricultural college, who was a visitor at the South Side stock yards Thursday, meat production has not kept up with the growth of population of the United

"There were 650 head of cattle in the country to every 1,000 popula-tion in 1900,' said Prof. McCamp-bell, "and this has now been reduced to 350 head. The figures on hogs and sheep show a similar reduction. In nine years hogs have dropped from 800 to 600 head for each 1,000 of population and sheep from 850 to

"For the reason of this showing of a lack of production the consumer must not be surprised at high prices. The capacity of the range is decreasing and any increase, if any, must zome from the farm, where the expense of production is much greater than the range."

Negro Arrested by Police for Having A Raised $2 Bill

Mixed Shipments of Hogs and Cattle Begin To Hit Stock Yards

Mixed shipments of hogs and catthe are beginning to come in large numbers at the stock yards, according to reports given out Thursday. With light receipts there was not a great deal on hand, in fact nothing of real good quality. The feeder market did not show any change from the last few days, values looking generally steady on the good kinds with thin light grades hard to dispose of. Supply of western beef was practically negligible and prices held about steady.

This is said to be due to the fact that most of the country buyers have abandoned the market and a farmer not having enough of hogs or sheep to make a full load partitions a car and fills it with two or more kinds of live stock.

My HEART and My HUSBAND Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

The Way Mr. Walters Responded to Madge's Invitation. When the door had closed behind im, Lillian looked at me with eyes n which lurked a twinkle. "'Fess up now," she said, "that you're wondering why under the sun didn't wait until tomorrow morning to tell Jim what I wanted him to do."

"Such a thought has crossed my alleged brain," I smilingly admitted.

"I don't blame you," she replied.

"and I wouldn't have told a man of another type than Jim. It will take him all night to turn the thing over in his mind and get it all settled to his own satisfaction. If he had been compelled to go on such an errand -knowing the importance of it, and the imperative necessity for secrecy -with but a few minutes' notice he would have been completely rattled. As it is, Jim will be a regular sleuth omorrow with nerves of steel." "Who but you could have read Jim that way?" I exclaimed, and the words were no idle ones.

What Lillian Suggested. "Wrap the nosegays in tinfoil until we get through with this business. I haven't time to make a bow now," Lillian said impatiently, but I knew that behind her mirth lay grim truth, and I straightened myself into an attitude of attention and waited for her further directions.

"Didn't you say this Walters chap has a sister you know very well?" she asked, after a few minutes in "Yes, Esther," I replied. "She was a favorite pupil of mine last year."

"Know her well enough to call her up and ask her and her brother over this evening for a game of "Of course." "Then do it, pronto." Lillian rose

"Make the invitation so cordial and insistent that when it is repeated to the brother he will suspect there is something up and break any other engagement he may have made." Significant Words.

"What'll we do with the rest of the family?" I ventured as I turned toward the door. "I'll drop a word in your father's ear that will keep him out of the way, while as for your mother-inlaw, you know that the merest hint to the effect that there is some mysterious planning going on will send her to her room in the seventh heaven of thrilling suspense."

We both laughed merrily at the remembrance of several occasions when my mother-in-law's fondness for anything that savored of melodrama in real life had reduced her usual arbitrary hauteur to abject meekness and obedience to orders. "As for the Dicky-bird." Lillian went on, answering my unspoken questions, "it isn't likely he'll hop into the nest before the strange birds fly away. But if he does, leave him to me. I'll clip his wings.' I permitted myself a bit of wondering speculation on my way down the stairs to the telephone as to the plan Lillian had for getting possession of the desk. That she had some definite course of action mapped out was sure, but with my slower wits could not guess what she meant

I could obey her orders, however, and in another minute I had called the Walters home and was listening to a deep, masculine voice, which I recognized at once as that of the young attorney.
"Mr. Arthur Walters speaking," the voice said crisply.
"How do you do, Mr. Walters," I to do.

said with my very best air for the benefit of any listening operator. This is Mrs. Graham. Is Esther there?"
"Not just now." His voice held a note of irrepressible astonishment. 'She went out on an errand for mother. But she will be back within 10 minutes."

"Oh, that will be all right then!"
I said. "Mrs. Underwood and I wondered if you and Esther could not run over tonight and take a hand at bridge. We are the only fiends in our family, and we haven't had a game in ages. It really is imperative that you come and join us."

I tried to throw a significance into my last words that I hoped he would recognize. And I could not repress a smile at my description of Lilliar. and myself as bridge fiends. Lillian, if she chooses, plays a brilliant game, but the pastime bores her to death, while I am one of the persons who possess absolutely no card Mr. Walters waited a minute that seemed an hour before answering. When he did speak his voice was casual. "We shall be very glad to come
