Those who appreciate good music and a delightful plot will find in "The Chocolate Soldier" two hours and a half of excellent entertainment. Sparkling with cleverness and bubbling over with music of the sort that leaves a lasting impression, "The Chocolate Soldier" has not a dull moment in the entire produc-tion. The plot itself, which is none other than Shaw's "Arms and the Man," a satire on the military of the Balkans, has enough keen moments to satisfy even if there was no music. The cast of artists has been carefully thosen for the Dunbar revival. A large chorus and a pretty one, picturesque costumes, an unusually good lot of principals and beautiful stage settings and scenery all help make this pleasing revival of the Straus light opera a notable one.

Of the artists, the jolly, blustering Colonel Popoff of the Bulgarian army as played by George O'Donnell, has a considerable share of the limelight, and deserves it. James Stevens with his "Dear Sir, Mister Bumerli," is charming, Miss Helena Morrill has the difficult role of Nadina and her voice is a reven
