General Anxiety in America Prevailing Over High Living Cost

Washington, Dec. 31.—General anxiety prevails throughout American business concerning the continued advance in prices and a readjustment appears imminent, the federal reserve board reports in its review of December business conditions.

The inference was strongly given that a reduction in prices is due because of a recognized curtailment of buying power, coupled with a lack of unanimity of opinion as to what the future holds.

Credits were said to have been shortened and uncertainty as to the next three months is forestalling the expansion in trade naturally to be expected as the nation settles towards its peace time activity. The high cost of living was referred to as an "unquestionable menace."
