

RULING ON FINNS' EXTRADITION IS EXPECTED TODAY

Race Driver Says Fast Trip To St. Paul in Auto Might Be Made Over Country Roads.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 8.—(Special Telegram)—Governor Burnquist took under advisement the case of William and Mike Finn of St. Paul, for whom extradition was asked by police officials of Omaha, who allege that the Finn brothers were implicated in the daylight robbery of a bank at Benson, a suburb of Omaha, December 31.

The presentation of evidence was concluded late Thursday with the examination of three witnesses introduced by Marshall Eberstein, chief of police at Omaha, and closing arguments by Patrick Ryan, attorney for the Finn brothers, and County Attorney R. D. O'Brien, representing the Nebraska officials.

Omaha Witnesses Testify. Mrs. A. W. Helbing of Omaha, the first witness presented, stated that she positively identified William Finn as one of the robbers. Mrs. Helbing testified that she acted as bookkeeper at the bank and that she was in the rear of the office when the robbers entered, but went forward and was forced to join the others when the bandits ordered them to stand with their faces against the wall.

On cross-examination she declared that she did not get what she described as a "long, healthy stare" at the suspect, but did get a good look while he was moving around the bank, and later, she said while he was in the vault. Mrs. Helbing picked Finn out as the man from among those attending the hearing. She was unable to identify Mike Finn as one of those implicated in the robbery.

Identify Both Men. William F. Huits of Benson, who testified that he was employed by the bank, identified William Finn as the man who had covered him with a pistol and Mike Finn as the man who had covered bank officials. He also picked the Finns out without having them identified.

Tommy Milton, St. Paul auto race driver, testified that an average of 40 miles an hour might be made over country roads in the winter in an automobile. He was called to substantiate the contention of the Omaha people that it would have been possible to have driven from Expect Ruling Today. Attorney Ryan, for the defense, in closing his case, declared that after the testimony he produced Wednesday in seeking to establish an alibi for the Finns, there was no need to bring out any more witnesses. A number of witnesses testified then that the Finn brothers were in St. Paul New Year's eve, and attended a watch party given by their sister.

The case against the Finns was closed by arguments reviewing their identification by those in the bank when the robbery occurred. It was stated the hearing of the case before Governor Burnquist was to establish a possibility of guilty on their part, and if such was found to exist, requisition for their extradition should be honored.

It is expected that the governor will announce his decision in the matter Friday.

COWBOY GOVERNOR OF NEBRASKA DIES IN TACOMA, WASH.

Ezra P. Savage Shifted Into Office by Mischance Of Politics.

Ezra Perin Savage, 77 years old, former governor of Nebraska and the first mayor of Tacoma, Wash., died at his home in Tacoma, Wash., yesterday. Born in poverty, educated by his own efforts, the "cowboy governor" of Nebraska was shifted into office by a strange mischance of politics.

He was nominated for lieutenant governor on the republican ticket in 1900 to offset the strength given the opposition by Bryan's candidacy for president, as he was exceptionally popular in the western part of the state, where he had lived 22 years. With Governor Dietrich he was elected and presided over the joint convention which balloted almost three months for two United States senators.

When Governor Dietrich was suddenly elected to the senate he was elevated to the gubernatorial chair, but was not re-elected. When the deadlock was broken and Governor Dietrich and J. H. Millard selected in conference, it created great enthusiasm and the spectators who crowded the main floor of the capitol rushed to the galleries threatening to shove the earlier arrivals over the railings. Grasping the situation Mr. Savage calmed the throng by shouting, "Stop that shoving out there or you'll push those people in front over the dashboard."

Born in Indiana. Governor Savage was born in Connorsville, Ind., in 1842, and three years later the family moved to Lyons, Ia., where a few years later his father died leaving the family in destitute circumstances. He helped support his mother and four smaller children, but each winter he managed to get some schooling by attending a log school house conducted by a backwoods teacher.

He attended high school in Daventon when 16 years old, paying his expenses by manipulating a buckaw. He attended the State University of Iowa two years, but was forced to quit when it was moved. He was disappointed, but continued his law studies at home and was admitted to the bar in an examination given by Leslie M. Shaw, who was later governor of Iowa at the same time Mr. Savage was governor of Nebraska.

Scout in Civil War. During the Civil War Mr. Savage disappeared from his home in Iowa following a conversation with a wounded soldier. His name appeared upon no muster rolls. He served in no organization, but he stayed several years, coming back as unostentatiously as he left. "I have no war record," he frequently said, "and I wouldn't brag of it if I had." His duties are reported to have been scouting in the mountains of Sargent, Neb., and in the scantily of Atlanta, as an associate of William F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill." Army commanders tell of his valor while serving under Grant and Sherman. In 1879 he established the town of Sargent, Ne., and in the scantily settled country the Indians needed attention. He saw they got it. Later the cattle rustlers grew troublesome and with Mr. Savage as a leader the law-abiding citizens soon exterminated the offenders. Two silent riders left seven men swinging on cottonwood trees near a buffalo wallow in Custer county and peace for the cattlemen was assured.

Governor Savage was largely interested in the grain and cattle business in western Nebraska until 16 years ago, when he moved to Tacoma and entered the lumber business at Eatonville.

London Press Differs With Hoover About Europe's Requirements

London, Jan. 8.—The evening newspapers, commenting on the statement of Herbert C. Hoover, concerning the financial and food requirements of Europe, take various views. The Westminster Gazette says: "It has long been obvious to close observers that the standing check to American sympathy on the financial situation is the persistent militarism of the allies and the consequent economic embarrassment."

"Mr. Hoover," declares the Globe, "is looking at the matter purely from the American viewpoint. He does not desire that his countrymen remember that they are citizens of the world as well as of the United States. The emergency is urgent. We are sure that the disposition of the American people will be to treat this matter, not as a bargain between keen business men, but as a difficulty to be settled among friends."

The Standard says: "Mr. Hoover sounds unsympathetic, but it is good hard sense. There is no use whatever in arranging loans and credits if the only result is to increase waste." Says the Pall Mall Gazette: "Mr. Hoover throws a bold douche upon the pauper spirit in which some parts of Europe are disposed to turn to America."

Berger Prepared to Go to Jail to Defend Political Principles

Washington, Jan. 8.—Victor L. Berger is prepared to go to jail in defense of his political principles. "Now I really do hope that the national house of representatives will bethink itself that it is supposed to be a house of representatives and stands for representative government, even for socialists," he wrote to William Tyler Page, clerk of the house, in a letter dated December 24 and made public yesterday.

"Otherwise I'll be compelled to repeat the stunt of Daniel O'Connell in Ireland and Charles B. Bradlaugh in Maryland."
