Mrs. Catt Sends Letter of Thanks to Equal Franchise Society.

The Equal Franchise society of Omaha recently sent $1,000 to the National Suffrage association and in acknowledgment Mrs. Charles E. Johannes, president, has received the following letter from Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt:

My Dear Mrs. Johannes: Your letter received this morning made the National American Woman Suffrage association glad indeed. So generous a contribution in support of the hard work we are doing makes our burdens lighter and our hope more certain that we shall pull through by February 1.

"I wish I could make you understand how really grateful we are. We are an unpaid group of women who are putting our best efforts and most of our own money into the struggle. We do appreciate every penny which comes to us from the splendid workers of the country. We are conscientious about its expenditure and try to make every dollar go as far as it possibly can be made to stretch.

"Will you kindly convey to the Equal Franchise society a cordial and urgent invitation to send a large delegation to the last suffrage convention, which will be held in Chicago February 12 to 18. We will send you all formal invitations later with an announcement of the tentative program. We wish to make that convention the gladdest and happiest ever held. We wish to put in it all the joy of our gratitude and yet to plan constructively for the best use of women's votes afterwards. I am most cordially and gratefully yours,

"CARRIE CHAPMAN CATT, President."
The local society desires to send a large delegation to the national convention to be held in Chicago February 12 to 18. Mrs. Edward E. Undeland, secretary, already has some names of members who will attend from here. Suffragists are hopeful that 36 states will have ratified the federal amendment before the Chicago convention. Twenty-six states with Oregon and Indiana the most recent, are now in the column of assent.

D. A. R. Chapter.
There will be a board meeting of the Major Isaac Sadler chapter of the D. A. R. Saturday at 2:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. William Archibald Smith, 102 South Thirty-fifth street.

Work of the Finnish Women.
Helsingfors, Finland, as a stranger in that town reports his impressions, is a city of women doing the work that used to be done by men. He is astonished by the number of women in practically every kind of occupation. On the trains the porters in the sleeping cars are women; in the fields and factories women are busy at heavy manual labor; in the banks there are apparently about 10 times as many women employed as men, and in one of the biggest financial institutions in the city positions of great responsibility are held by women. Compared with other countries where the spectacle of women in what formerly were exclusively masculine employments became common during the war, Finland in general and Helsingfors in particular, carry the proportion of women much further, for the man-power of Finland was so greatly depleted that a large proportion of the remaining male population is now needed for military service. In the Finnish foreign office, for example, women were holding positions which, says the correspondent, "would be entirely beyond the aspirations of their sisters in the State department at Washington or the British foreign office." No other country, it seems safe to say shows so wide and general an adaptation of women to the carrying on of every kind of work, and although the change is said to have come about rapidly, the women seem remarkably at ease in their new employments.

Lamb à la Venison.
Take a leg of lamb, make deep slits in the meat, into which insert strips of salt pork that have previously been rolled in pepper and cloves; bake two hours, or according to the size of the roast, basting frequently. Take from the oven and about an hour before serving spread currant jelly over it, return to the oven and let it brown.

In certain parts of India no girl can marry unless her father has been pacified by a gift of rice and a few rupees.

SHOOK WITH NERVOUSNESS

A Lady Was Flat On Her Back With Terrible Spells, But Her Husband Got Cardui, and Now She Is Grateful.

McKinney, Texas—Mrs. Mary Stephenson, of this place, states: "About a year and a half ago I was down in bed for six weeks, not able to sit up. I was flat on my back and had terrible spells. . . . Why, it looked like I would die. At times I didn't know anything. I would get nervous, I couldn't bear anyone to talk to me,—I would just jerk and shoo with nervousness. . . . across my back was so sore and ached me all the time. I would have a dizzy feeling. My limbs ached me and I would get numb and feel so weak. . . . I said to my husband I knew Cardui was good and I believed I had best try it.

He got me a bottle of Cardui, and when I had only taken one-half bottle of Cardui I felt stronger. I took a half a dozen bottles altogether, then in two weeks after I began taking I was up, in three I was doing my work. I praise Cardui for I believe it saved my life and I am grateful."

For over 40 years Cardui has been helping weak, sick women back to health and strength. Try it.

Books and Authors

Books and Authors.

A wise critic once said that the best way to discover a book's quality is to "test it with a hatpin." If the point, stuck in at random, strikes an arresting passage, one which aptly from the context strikes out strikingly, the book possesses real fiber.

"This book is not only the best novel done by Miss Carter herself, but also one of the best that any American has ever done." Thus writes a critic of Willa Sibber's new book, "My Antonia." Miss Carter is a Nebraskan and a graduate of the University of Nebraska.

Moving picture producers are begging the publishers for advance proofs of new novels and it is not uncommon for motion picture rights to be sold before a book is off the presses. "Little Miss By-The-Day," Lucille Van Slyke's charming romance, has been accepted for production by the Famous Players-Lasky corporation.

Edna Ferber's first book, "Dawn O'Hara," was rescued from the wastebasket by her mother, who, on reading it, insisted that it be sent to a publisher. This was done, and the hitherto newspaper woman was launched on a successful career as a novelist.

The sales on the book, "The Young Visitors," by Daisy Ashford, are well on the way to the 200,000 mark, and there is no let-up in the demand. This delightful story is only 105 pages long, yet it has received press notices that would fill four average sized newspapers.

If you had to name the most delightful old maid in fiction, who would she be? The readers of L. M. Montgomery's famous "Anne" stories believe she is Miss Cornelia, who, in "Rainbow Valley," assumes a new role of foster mother and adopts an orphan. This "Mary-creature," as Miss Cornelia persists in calling the little waif up to the time of her decision to adopt her, would be a problem to a more efficient person than Miss Cornelia. She is a child who prayed the devil on the reasoning that God is good and it is the devil who needs placating!

Owen Wister, the American novelist, is the grandson of the famous actress, Frances Anne Kemble Butler, better known as "Fanny Kemble."

David Belasco began his famous career as a playwright and producer by carrying a spear in a production of "Hamlet."

Gertrude Atherton was born on Rincon Hill, San Francisco, Cal.

Cornelia, the girl who would rather be sorry than safe, is twin sister to Emmy Lou and Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm. She appears in the book of that name by Lucy Fitch Perkins.

On the wooded hills that overlook the Hudson river, nearly opposite Poughkeepsie, N. Y., John Burroughs has built himself a picturesque retreat, a rustic house, which he has named "Slabside." The cabin is a well-built, two-story structure, its unceconomical but fitting name having been given it because its outer walls are formed of bark-covered slabs. "My friends frequently complain," said Mr. Burroughs, "because I have not given my house a prettier name; but this name just expresses the place, and the place just meets the want that I felt for something simple, homely, secluded,—something with the bark on."

SALADS

Appetizing and Nutritious.
One dish that tempts the appetite when others fail is a crisp cold salad. While the man of the house may call it effeminate and disparage it from the "real man's" point of view as being dainty and lacking in nutriment, he probably has in mind a combination of fruits and vegetables, and has entirely overlooked the possibilities of a salad that combines vegetables and meats. Once such a tempting dish has been set before him, his prejudice will instantly vanish.

In these days of excellent canned meats (such as are advertised in this paper), such a variety can be kept on hand that a different salad equally delectable and nutritious, may be served from day to day.

If a light flavor of onion or garlic is desired, the salad bowl may be rubbed with a slice of onion or a clove of garlic.

Beef Salad.
Cut in dice three rather large cold boiled potatoes and put in a bowl. Add the contents of a can of beef loaf cut into small pieces, and marinate with a French dressing. Put on ice, and when ready to serve add one tablespoon of pickled beets, one teaspoon of chives, and a tablespoon of butter with two of flour and stir until it bubbles briskly. Add one quart of hot milk gradually and when smooth add the oysters and liquor. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

Oyster Soup.

An excellent cream soup with oysters is made by heating one quart of oysters in their liquor, with enough cold water added to make a quart of broth. When the boiling point is reached rub the oysters through a sieve until fine, pour the liquor over the pulp and set aside where it will keep warm. Blend two ounces of butter with two of flour and stir until it bubbles briskly. Add one quart of hot milk gradually and when smooth add the oysters and liquor. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

Broiled Kidneys on Toast.

First boil them 10 minutes in soup stock, drain and slice them. Then put the slices alternately with the thin slices of bacon on skewers and cap each skewer end with a mushroom. Broil them until the bacon is brown and crisp and then slip the pieces on thin slices of toast. Make a thickened gravy with some of the stock in which the kidneys were cooked and pour it over the toast.

DEVELOP MUSICAL TASTE.

The saying, "there is no accounting for tastes," contains rather more falsehood than truth. Taste is very largely accounted for by habit. The child whose musical experience is limited to trashy songs and accompanied by an ill-tuned instrument cannot be expected to appreciate fine music artistically rendered. Children, even more than adults, love the familiar. Let them see to it that they are familiar with the best.

This does not mean that children should be bored by listening to music which they are too undeveloped to enjoy. Let the younger ones sing the beautiful songs that have stood the test of years. Let them feel the thrill of such dramatic, pictorial pieces as the "Erl King," "The Two Grenadiers," or "In the Hall of the Mountain King." Let them hear the simple, exquisite melodies of the old, classic composers, Bach, Mozart, Gluck.

In selecting music, remember that just as the child's body and mind develop through the various stages through which the human race has passed, so his musical taste will also tread in the footsteps of the race. Children are especially fond of the tones of the xylophone, flute, harp and violin, these instruments being direct descendants of the first musical instruments invented by our remote ancestors. Excellent phonograph records of these instruments can be obtained. Young children like simple melodies, strong rhythm, plenty of dramatic color and action. They enjoy the old dances, minuets, gavottes, the lullabies and the spirited marches of various nations.

As children develop they will understand and enjoy the more complex and subtle music of a more advanced age. Let them hear really fine music, let them listen to some great orchestra; but do not fail to give them in their own home the works of the masters, that these may have in later years the dear familiarity of long-loved friends. No parent, if it is at all possible, can afford to miss the joy of playing to his children, but the player-piano and phonograph, while they will not replace hand playing, are most powerful aids in cultivating musical taste in children.—Musical and Childhood.

Three Hundred Years

Puritan Hams-Bacon

Three hundred years ago there landed at Plymouth, Massachusetts, a little band of Puritans, known in history as The Pilgrims. They were—

- A select few
- Determined to be underlings to none
- Clean in mind and body
- Definite in their object and with a strong fidelity of purpose.

and to their influence we owe the best of our heritage.

PURITAN Hams and Bacon are founded on Puritan principles, fortified with our complete confidence of their sterling worth.
