Visitors Unable to See Game Tri-State Bowling Tourna-In Serious Light; Creighton Falls Into the Same Spirit.

Creighton took the second and uninteresting game of basket ball.

Drake was beaten before they appeared on the court. Not a man on the team, with the exception of Ted Payseur, could take the game seriously. Creighton fell into the spirit of the visitors and didn't exert themselves at any time during the game.

Kearney for Creighton started the scoring by dropping the ball into the basket without touching the ring after four minutes of play. Brindley countered with a field goal a few seconds later and tied the score, and Ted Payseur followed with another field goal, making the score 4 to 2, Drake. Haley tied the score a few minutes later and Shaw and the score after the score score a few minutes later and Shaw pushed the Drakes into the lead again with another field goal. Haley came back with two goals in quick succession and the visitors were unable to overcome Creighton's lead after that. At the end of the first period Creighton led, 28 to 12. Ten minutes before the end of the game, Coach Mills sent in his entire second team.

SOME TIME

An epidemic of flu and French pastry has the works by both handles.

The critical condition of the country is aggravated by an outburst of Ouija-board rash. Ouija is pronounced Wee-jee, wee-jee! With the oil on the second syllable, reading from left to right, which is the tures and gives an interesting usual procedure when identifying flashlight photographs of the visiting glimpse into the past of our coun-Don't treat this Wee-jee thing too lightly, like a grocer weighing a pound of anything. It's almost as serious as the delsarte scourge which weakened the United States in 1880, the bustle fever of 1890 and the ukulele crimes of 1915.

We've heard of the magic carpet, but who ever heard of flat-wheeling down to the lumber yard and grabing a piece of enchanted scantling? That's all a Wee-jee board is. A hunk of kindling wood that's too lazy to work at its trade. By shoving a wooden flatiron over its occult surface you can get into communication with the spiritual bailiwick and me out why a plumber always spends two hours in the attack looking for a leak in the cellar. And also, after he does reach the cellar, why does he think he can find the leak by pulling the stoppers out of all your bottles?

Tread lightly in the kitchen, stranger, the linoleum may be supernatural. By rubbing your busted arches lightly over its grease-spangled surface it may reveal the secret of the sphinx, or why J. Ham Lewis' pink whiskers faded when the English blockade cut off the supply of German dyes. Even the humblest object may possess the power of communing with the departed. The nut cracker may be the keyboard on which we will establish gossip with Alexander Dowie of Zion City. The pale, anaemic corkscrew—ah—but why get another toothache in a pulled tooth?

In the old days a wood pile was only a wood pile, but since the Weejee bug sprouted horns the lumber yard possesses powers which a king's ransom could not buy. And in those days it was no small thing to call the dowager empress a fat bum. And get away with it. Woodman, spare that oak bush. In childhood it sheltered me. And in my second childhood I'll make a Wee-jee board of it now. Don't put the ax to that hickory nut vine. One massage of its gnarled surface and that nut tree may start Hamlet's old man and the headless horseman of Sleepy Hollow off on another ghostly marathon. They were nuts.

When starting on a Wee-jee seance proceed gently. Don't ask the collection of 70 splinters too much. Don't start in by seeking the solution to the telephone trouble. Too much strain will cause the powerful Weejee to warp. Don't try to get into communication with your departed husband unless the Wee-jee is insulated. It may get red hot and burn your little pink fingerettes.

If a slab of floor material possesses telepathic powers, why not ex periment with other woods? A wedge out of an old mahogany bar would be the darby. Twiddle both mitts over the polished grain and think of the 18th amendment, not as an epitaph, but as a psalm. If the departed spirits don't answer the first ring, don't get discouraged and lick the varnish off the high-licensed Wee-jee bar. There may yet be bottled in bond balm in Gilead. Keep rubbing and your efforts may be rewarded by the angelic tingle of a ghostly cash register in some far-off spiritual cafe. Don't get faint-hearted if your first seven year's efforts go for Sweeney

THE ways of women are illusweek, when a rough mountaineer tries to make love to the little mountain girl. Clumsily he tries to put his arm about her waist and pleads for a kiss.
