STOMACH ULCER GONE SUFFERED 16 YEARS

Says his stomach is perfect now, and his weight has increased.

"I had ulcers of the stomach so bad that I was sent to the hospital. Treatment there finally got me on my feet. In a few days I was down again. You said you wouldn't guarantee Mils Emulsion to cure a stomach ulcer of the stomach, but I tried it anyway. If it does the work for others it did for me. You ought not to be backward about any case of stomach ulcers. I have now taken twelve bottles and my stomach is in perfect condition. I feel better and weigh more than I have for 16 years, and I have had stomach trouble all of that time." - L. S. Walker, Greenleaf, Kan.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you use the purgative of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights. Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there is no sickness or pain after taking them. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating. No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cured with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face. Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 10c and 25c.

MAYOR BOOSTS ARMY LIFE IN A PROCLAMATION

Calls On Young Men of Omaha to Carefully Study Courses Offered to Learn Trades.

For the purpose of stimulating interest in the nation-wide campaign now being waged to obtain additional recruits for the United States army, Mayor Smith yesterday issued an official proclamation calling the attention of the young men of Omaha and Nebraska to the many advantages and opportunities the army affords for improvement of their capacity for good citizenship and proficiency in the various trades and professions they elect to follow upon enlistment. The chief executives of the principal cities of the country daily are lending their endorsement in a similar manner to the intensive campaign now being conducted to secure recruits to fill up the ranks in the various army units.

Mayor Smith's proclamation follows: "The War department of the United States government is now desirous of securing recruits to fill up the ranks of existing units in the United States army. I doubt if the policy of the War department, as it is now being pursued, is understood by most of our young men. I am advised that those enlisting in military service can now select the branch of service they prefer to be connected with; can indicate the studies they desire to pursue, or the trade or character of work they desire to become more proficient in; and these educational facilities are being afforded to a much greater extent than ever before. Young men are thus afforded the opportunity to improve their capacity for good citizenship and proficiency in various trades while in the army. I respectfully call the attention of the young men of this city to the educational opportunities afforded by service in the army at this time, and believe that young men not yet committed to any profession or trade may very profitably secure this educational training while undergoing military training and study in the army."

"ED. P. SMITH, Mayor."

Now Says He's Ready And "Very Anxious" to Support His Family

Otto Paul Mickish yesterday declared that he is ready and anxious to support his four children, who live with his wife, Mrs. Emma Mickish, at 1624 Pratt street. He has a preliminary hearing before Judge Troup in juvenile court on the charge of wife and child abandonment.

Otto left the family last March and he admitted that he has not contributed to their support since then. Tuesday he was going through Omaha and stopped off and called up his home, asking to see his oldest son. The boy met him an hour later and brought a policeman with him. Otto was soon in jail.

"My wife ordered me to get out of the house last March. That is why I left," he testified. "I am able and willing to contribute to the support of my children." "That's all we ask," exclaimed Deputy County Attorney Kubat. "If he's ready to do that and to put up a bond to do it, we'll stop prosecution on this charge." Mr. Mickish said he would get the bond and contribute regularly to adequate support of the children. Mrs. Mickish filed suit for a divorce yesterday when her husband appeared here. He has been living in Chicago since he left Omaha.

WOUNDED MAN BELIEVED SHOT AS A "PROWLER"

Taxicab Driver Knocking at Door In Early Morning Is Greeted With Gun Volley.

Thomas Lenhah, Thirty-seventh and L streets, South Side, was taken from Central police station to Lord Lister hospital at 11 yesterday morning, five hours after he had been shot in the right groin by an unidentified assailant somewhere in North Omaha.

Ben Cavin, 2730 Charles street, was arrested at 6:15 yesterday morning after Lenhah called police, and is being held under bond for slouching with intent to wound the man, who cannot identify Cavin as his assailant, and Cavin declares that he only shot at a "house prowler" five times at about 4 in the morning, and thought the shots went wild.

Cavin told police the prowler was a tall man wearing a light overcoat, and that he shot only when the man refused to get off the front porch of his home. Lenhah tells a different story. He says he drove an acquaintance known as "Cy" to North Omaha late Tuesday night, following a dance at Twenty-fourth and J streets, South Side. The acquaintance left Lenhah the latter says, telling him he would return in half an hour. The injured man said that when his acquaintance failed to return he knocked at the door of a house that he thought "Cy" had entered. It was when he was leaving the house, he said, that his knock was answered by a volley of shots from an upstairs window.

My Heart and My Husband ADELE GARRISON'S New Phase of "Revelations of a Wife"

What Harry Underwood Did to "Mr. Bridgeham."

I have smiled sometimes at the melodramatic expression, "blood turned to ice." But after that moment of suspense following Harry Underwood's exclamation "I shall live the words with respect instead of mirth. I do not believe there was an inch of my body that was not chilled as if it were mid-winter instead of a warm early autumn day I turned in the seat of my car and watched the racing car we had heard come swiftly up to us and stop abruptly.

For one of the two men in it was the unpleasant individual who had given me the name of Bridgeham, and who, I was sure, had introduced himself to Alice Holcombe as Hambridge, and had given her as bad a quarter of an hour as he had inflicted upon me.

The other man was a rather vacuous looking youth, whom Jerry Ticer had pointed out to me as "One of them there summer folks with more money than sense."

COFFEE THROWING CULMINATES IN DECREE TO WIFE

Pretty Spouse of Bell Boy Rouses Sympathy With Stirring Narrative.

"He threw a pot full of coffee at me one day," exclaimed Mrs. Patricia Hald Beck in divorce court yesterday before Judge Wakeley in a suit for a divorce from George M. Beck, bell boy at the Hotel Conant.

Mrs. Beck is young, blond, slender, pretty and was stylishly gowned in a blue tailored suit with low neck and an inch-wide black velvet band around her neck. Her husband wore a "loud" striped suit and chewed unconcernedly during the testimony.

At the conclusion of the trial Judge Wakeley granted Mrs. Beck a divorce and denied the cross-petition of her husband who also had asked for divorce. Testimony of Mrs. Beck was such in other respects that her attorney referred to the man as "this beast."

Beck's real name was formerly Roekendorf. He had it changed legally. He testified that his wife had called him "a Dutch devil," and admitted throwing the coffee at her. A brother of Beck, who testified in his behalf, admitted on cross-examination that he had received a letter from the Omaha Welfare board stating that Mrs. Beck had complained about his unwelcome presence at her home and advising him to stay away.

The Becks lived at 4212 Grant street. When Mrs. Beck filed her divorce petition she was granted an order restraining her husband from coming to the house. She received $40 a month temporary alimony while the suit was pending.

Delirious Patient Attempts to Leap From Window at Home

R. S. Gross, a druggist, said to be delirious from the effects of pneumonia, attempted to leap from a second story window of his home at 1408 Sherwood avenue, at 10 yesterday morning. The timely arrival of Mrs. Edith Christian, Sherman apartments, prevented the man from committing the act. Police were called to quiet Mr. Gross.

Two men whose names were not learned, were holding the raving man, locked in an upstairs bedroom, when Mrs. Christian, who had been acting as a nurse for the family for two days, returned from breakfast at her home.

Mr. Gross, scantily attired, was attempting to open a window when Mrs. Christian burst into the room, she said. He has been in a delirium for two days, Mrs. Christian said. His wife and 16-months' old child, Ronald, are also stricken with pneumonia at the home.

The sick man was left at home in the care of physicians. The great national exposition of South America manufacturers and products which was planned for Detroit in March and April has been postponed until 1922.

of them there summer folks with more money than sense." His one evident accomplishment was driving a racing car, and he appeared to be anxious to display it upon all occasions. It had been ridiculously easy for the other man to enlist his aid in anything that appeared like a race. But, his chase ended, he apparently lost all interest in everything else, and as soon as his passenger had alighted he started down the road at a furious gait, and in another instant was lost to our view.

That this was a move totally unexpected and disconcerting to Mr. Bridgeham or Hambridge was evidenced by his quick change from an air of triumph over a quarry run to earth, to something very nearly resembling panic.

"Hi, there!" he yelled. "What the devil—come back here!"

Harry Underwood Speaks.

"You'll have to speak a little louder, my friend," Harry Underwood drawled lazily. He placed himself at the side of my car, between me and the other man, and his lounging attitude and half-closed eyes gave him the air of either just awakening from a comfortable drowse or just going into one. But I knew that beneath his half-closed eyelashes not the slightest movement of the other man escaped him, that he was ready for any emergency, as he himself had expressed it, "strictly on the job."

"That's other chap's just a little mite hard of hearing," Mr. Underwood went on. "But you needn't be discommoded in the least. My car is at your service as far as the nearest police station."

His change from the yokel dialect to the diction of the man of the world was no more startling than the alteration in his attitude. Whether he had seen anything menacing in the man's actions or not I do not know, but his figure had straightened from its lounging position, and his eyes were wide-open, fixed intently upon the other man. I was irresistibly reminded of a tiger I had once seen on a visit to a zoo. It was just about to spring, and there was something strikingly similar in the tense attitude of the beast I remembered and the man I was watching.

An Unexpected Taunt.

"You'll go to the police station, all right," the other man blustered, and looking at him I saw that whatever faults or virtues he might possess he was not without a certain brute courage, "and so will your lady friend. I've just got wise to the reason why you flashed my tires, you—"

He began to curse viciously. Harry Underwood made one spring, seized him by the collar, and twisted him around until he faced me.

"Now beg this lady's pardon for your language," he said quietly, "or something very unpleasant is likely to happen to you and that pronto."

The man made a sudden swerve and jerked himself free, leaving the soft collar of his shirt in Mr. Underwood's grasp.

"Beg your pardon!" he sneered, dexterously putting the car between himself and Mr. Underwood. "Much good that'll do her in the electric chair—"

He stopped with a gasp. I saw that he had not meant to utter the words he had, but that his anger at Harry Underwood had run away with his discretion, never a very conspicuous quality of his makeup.

Harry Underwood's eyes narrowed to pinpoints.

"This man's either a plain nut or he needs killing," he said icily. "Just start the car, Mudge, run over him if he gets in the way, and then go to Southampton as soon as you can and send the police back here. Then go straight home. I'll take care of this gentleman until his proper guardians arrive."
