BY BEATRICE FAIREAX

Poor Little Girl.

Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: I have read your splendid advice to others, but now want some of my own.

My mother objects to my speaking to boys. "I have a boy," "friend," he means nothing more to me than a friend. He doesn't live in Omaha, he came here to go to school. He came to the house once and mother and I had a slight quarrel. She said, "School girls shouldn't speak to boys and if she ever sees me walking down the street or even talking to a boy she would beat me until I couldn't sit down for a week!"

I am fairly well looking, but am short for my age. Many people think I'm older than I am because I'm well-matured for my age.

How could I tell this friend without making him angry that mother objects to his calling?

2. I have never had a party but once in my life. How can I persuade her to let me have a party for my birthday?

I have never gone to mother when in joy or sorrow, because she wouldn't listen or rather she would think it nonsense.

I can not skate, swim, and can only dance such little things as taught by my schoolmates. Mother thinks them all silly, and because of it I feel like a wallflower or an ornament not meant for any good.

Hoping to see this in print Thursday or Friday, I will thank you in advance.

SHORRY.

In my opinion a mother should not be so strict as to refuse to let her daughter speak to boys. You may be too young to have boys call, but if boys and girls are permitted to mingle as friends, under the chaperonage of an older person, there is not half the desire to keep clandestine appointments. I think little parties are splendid for young folks and I do not understand why a mother should be unreasonable. Perhaps you haven't told me all of the story. Certainly the greatest mistake a mother can make is to keep her daughter outside her confidence. If she ridicules your joys and sorrows, naturally you will not confide in her. She will regret this if she is a wise woman.

A Reader—You had better ask the young lady what she means by "love up." I do not know.

Anxious Blondy—When a new acquaintance says "I'm very glad to meet you" one should reply with "Thank you," or "And I am very glad to meet you." In fact, any

Personals

Woolsey-Sundland.
The marriage of Miss Ruth Sundland and Floyd Woolsey took place Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Hilda Sundland. Dr. D. E. Jenkins of the University of Omaha will officiate. Both the bride and groom were graduated from that institution and Mr. Woolsey was a member of Phi Sigma Phi. Pink carnations and ferns formed the decorations. Miss Karin Lilienstolpe was the only attendant.

The bride was crowned in white georgette and her veil fell from a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white nosegays and sweetpeas.

Only immediate relatives were present at the ceremony.

Mr. Woolsey and his bride will reside in Omaha.

Heart Beats

By A. K.

All Rights Reserved.
A merry wind
Awoke at dawn—
Half-truant—
Half an errand breeze—
It ran from tree
To tree
And whispered
Something to each one—
It sounded like:
The night is gone!
And all the little
Sentinel stars
Have left their watch
To Master Sun—
They've fallen
Fast asleep.
The wind took from
Each bird
And bug—
And bee—
And barnyard fowl—
A note—
And then assembled them
In one grand reveille,
Their call—
Interpreted by the wind
Was a message
To the drowsy world.
They sang:
"Awake!
Come meet the dawn
Wherein
Lies opportunity.
You sleep—
And wish—
And long—
For chance
To do great things—
To scintillate—
And yet you hesitate.
Preparation!
Drives your hope
And slays
Your confidence.
The rising dew
Is stimulant
To brain
And brawn
Of man.
If you would win
In mighty aims—
Come out
And meet the dawn—
The morning holds
Man's greatest chance—
And offers Opportunity—
While sluggards and sloths
Go on sleeping!"

The Swift Year Book is Out Send for Your Copy

Swift & Company was a favorite topic of conversation last year.

Committees investigated it, commissions attacked it, law makers threatened it, many condemned it.

Presently people began to think about it; began to realize that Swift & Company was performing a necessary service in a big, efficient way; began to wonder whether it could be done as well in any other way.

Read what Swift & Company did last year, and what it meant to you, in the Swift & Company Year Book, just issued.

It's a fascinating narrative—simple facts in simple words. There is one ready for you. Send for it.
