Studded with stars unutterably bright,
Through which the moon's unclouded grandeur rolls,
Seems like a canopy which love has spread
To curtain her sleeping world.

WOMAN'S SECTION OF THE BEE

To one clear harp in divers tones,
That men may rise on stepping-stones
Of their dead selves to higher things.

About Getting Slender. We are going to talk about getting thin—then we will tell you thin women how to get fat. You always want to know. I don't know why. Fleshy women would do well to begin a course in physical culture. It's difficult to make yourself take vigorous exercises if you haven't ever had them. Join a class till you get the habit, and then you will be more likely to take them at home—alone.

And if you are fat don't—oh, don't—wear stripes that run around, and do your hair pompadour, and ruffle your skirts, and wear short evening frolics below the waistline that make you look like a barrel. Don't.

If you are well corseted, and then dress in the things fat women should wear, people won't notice that you are fleshy. They will get an impression that is delightful when they see you, and your form will not be as prominent as a black eye.

If you are stoop-shouldered, throw the shoulders back every minute you can remember to do so, bringing the shoulder blades as Cyclamen!

How beautiful you are—
Standing in my window
Against a pink sky
Background
Many little nohs
From out the soil
Are unfolding
Dark green
Velvet leaves.
To equal their perfection
These human artists struggle
But none attains it.
Your waxen blossoms—
Poised atop
Of six tall stems
Like crimson butterflies.
Extracting nectar
From the tubes.
And yet
You are but a trinket
Of God's handiwork—
Like other flowers
And kings—
And common folks—
And me.
We are all fashioned
After His designing.
And so I know
That Time
Will take away
Your beauty—
Rend the lovely
Winged petals.
From your stalks—
And leave
A battered heart—
Torn and uncovered—
To the capricious world.
Then—
Out into the discards
You must go
With all the rest—
Like other flowers
And kings
And common folks—
And me—
For such
Is the law of life.
