This is called the "Auto Carrier, Jr." and is equipped with twin driving wheels, in the rear, which get their power direct from the motor contained between them. Great speed, carrying power and durability are claimed for this model, one of those in favor at the recent auto and motorcycle show at Olympia, England.

James J. Van Alen, financier and society leader, has sold his home at 15 West 65th street, New York City, and is making final preparations for his departure from America for a more liberal country. Since he has been deprived of light wines and beer through the prohibition act, Mr. Van Alen is going abroad, where his rights to liberty will not be infringed upon.

This chubby youngster, "Love o' Mike," was claimed by two New York mothers. He was found abandoned in the Grand Central Terminal, New York City, and was sent to the Bellevue Hospital, where Mrs. Eise Wentz identified him as her son, August Philip, who was kidnapped last July when seven weeks old. Nellie Bly, a newspaper writer, disputed Mrs. Wentz's claim to the baby, stating that the child's real mother communicated with her and wanted to regain the baby.

Left to right: Nellie Bly, Mrs. Wentz, Mrs. Lena Lisa and her two children. Miss Bly wrote a newspaper article about the case, and Mrs. Lena Lisa, who, it has been established, is the real mother of the child, communicated with her. Mrs. Lisa is a widow and was forced to abandon the baby because of her inability to provide for it in addition to her other son, William, four years old. Mrs. Wentz was broken-hearted at the outcome and admitted she was probably mistaken in her claim to the baby.

Wooden bungalows of a standard type are being erected in England to help solve the housing problem. The bungalows contain three bedrooms, a large living room, a kitchen and a bath. The houses are delivered in sections and can be built complete for occupancy in three weeks. The buildings have the approval of the British Ministry of Health.

Great liners bring ice and chill into freezing New York. Photograph of the S. S. Cronia as she docked at her berth. The sides of the ship and her decks were ice-encrusted and blanketed with snow. She had a very severe and trying journey across the Atlantic.
