

SONG WEEK TO BE OBSERVED HERE: STARTS SUNDAY

Choirmasters and Ministers Urged to Co-Operate—Mayor Issues Proclamation and Names Committee.

Omaha choirmasters and ministers have been requested by a group of representative local musicians to co-operate with them in observing National Week of Song, beginning February 22.

Schools to Study Music. In his proclamation, he urges the schools of the state to follow out a general scheme of bringing music to the fore in the studies of the week.

Mayor Smith last night issued the following proclamation: "Throughout the whole United States, the week commencing on Washington's birthday has been designated as the National Week of Song, a week when the whole nation will unite as a mighty chorus.

POSLAM VITAL TO SUFFERERS FROM ECZEMA

If you have eczema, your prompt use of Poslam will mean all the difference between immediate comfort and a long period of itching distress. Take the easy, pleasant way to quick relief. Apply Poslam right on the raw places that burn and itch. Feel a burden lifted as the skin is soothed and pacified. You will know then to what a high state of efficiency the reliable remedy has been brought. Poslam is concentrated. Short treatment suffices for most minor troubles.

How To Keep Young As You Grow Older

It is possible to have a hale, hearty old age. The body in youth possesses more heat than the body of middle age or old age, because the blood contains more oxygen.

It is possible for middle-aged and older men and women to increase the oxygen carrying capacity of their blood—not by pumping oxygen into the lungs, but by supplying the blood with the organic iron which attracts oxygen just as the magnet attracts steel.

Two warring forces—the red blood cells and the white blood cells—are always contending in the blood. They are the processes of building up, and tearing down.

During youth the hot, red blood, vitalized with oxygen, enables the building up process to overcome the tearing down process, and the tendency of the body is all toward growth and development.

As middle age approaches the two forces tend to equalize each other, and the body retains its vigor and vitality.

But, with the coming of old age, the victory of the tearing down process is manifested by the slow, gradual decay of the vital energies.

The stress of modern life makes us old at fifty, decrepit at sixty, and useless, helpless wrecks before we pass our seventieth year.

There is absolutely no necessity for this premature senility, this surrender of strength and vitality, this abandonment of the pleasures and responsibilities of life. The bodily forces and energy can be maintained, the arterial degeneration prevented, and a hearty, healthy old age assured.

REOLO supplies to the cells of the body the organic iron—which is easily assimilated by the blood—and attracts oxygen just as the magnet attracts steel. It enriches the blood with cell-salts and vitalizes it with life-giving oxygen—increases the circulation, and by its power of cell nutrition and reconstruction—its tonic and stimulating qualities makes the entire body glow with health.

Start the REOLO TREATMENT today and you will be delighted with the steady improvement in your strength, energy and vitality. The large package of 100 pleasant, tasteless tablets, costs for two weeks' treatment, only costs $1.

to sing the songs we love, with which all are familiar, and to give expression to our feelings of joy for the return of peace and our hope and desire for health, happiness and increased brotherly love.

Names Committee to Assist. It is urged that in schools, in churches, clubs, in stores, and in places of business, all unite in a grand anthem of song during this week. It is urged by the committee having this in charge that special attention be given to the following songs on the following dates:

Sunday, February 22—"America." Monday, February 23—"Old Black Joe." Tuesday, February 24—"Battle Hymn of the Republic." Wednesday, February 25—"Star Spangled Banner." Thursday, February 26—"Home, Sweet Home." Friday, February 27—"There's a Long, Long Trail." Saturday, February 28—"How Firm a Foundation."

"For the purpose of aiding in carrying out this program in all the places indicated, I have appointed the following committee: Burton H. Twichell, George W. Campbell, Mrs. J. Stanley Hill, Dr. R. M. Silby, Mrs. Ward Safer, Mrs. Douglas Welpton and James E. Brit.

"I urge the co-operation of all citizens in this good endeavor." ED. P. SMITH, mayor.

Complaints Against Broker Withdrawn By Hotel Fontenelle

Complaints against H. Bryan Owsley, who was arrested several days ago in Peoria, Ill., for passing worthless checks in Omaha amounting to approximately $3,000, according to H. Gregory, manager of the Hotel Fontenelle, have been withdrawn. Owsley was released from jail at Peoria upon telegraphic advice from Mr. Gregory, according to Detective Ben Danbaum. The detective returned from Peoria yesterday.

Owsley is alleged to have passed the worthless checks while acting as manager of the E. W. Wagner Brokerage company of this city for one week last November. He figured as a social lion here, taking part in many exclusive social events.

My Heart and My Husband

ADELE GARRISON'S New Phase of "Revelations of a Wife"

What Katherine's Letter Wrought From Harriet's Lips. "Dearest Girl," This Katherine's letter began and the sight of the familiar words brought back to me the many times I had heard the phrase, her favorite appellation for me, from the lips of my little friend.

Next to Lillian, I care more for Katherine than for any other woman in the world. I am genuinely fond of my mother-in-law, but there is not quite the same bond between us that grips my affections so securely to Lillian first of all, and then to Katherine. We have been through much together, we three women, experiences that we will never forget, recollections that bind us into more than the usual feminine friendship.

I had asked the usual perfunctory permission of my sister-in-law to read the letter, she had consented as conventionally, but I knew that behind her placid air lay an agony of impatience to know the contents of the epistle. Therefore I hurried through the reading of the communication, which was little more than a note, and showed every evidence of having been written hurriedly.

"Your letter was delayed in reaching me—the mail service in this section would be a disgrace to an African jungle—therefore I am mailing my reply directly to Marvin, hoping it will be waiting for you upon your return.

"Of course, we were planning to see you before we left. Did you dare think for a moment that I would go so far without seeing you first? But we had meant the meeting to be a dinner in town with us. However, it so happens that your invitation—you see, I am accepting it as freely as it is given—solves two or three pretty domestic problems for me, besides the great pleasure it will give me to be with you, so I have gained Jack's consent and we will be with you Thursday, to stay until the following Tuesday, when we leave for the west.

"Madge, dear, I do not know quite how to word this, but would you mind having no one to meet us for dinner, or anything like that? Jack has been terribly nervous since he came back, and he dreads meeting people. I know you will understand. Until I see you,

"Lovingly yours," "KATHERINE." I tried not to let my face show my dismay at this last paragraph and made a pretence of continuing to read the letter for several seconds after I had finished it in order to decide what was best to do. Finally I decided to show it, just as it was, to my sister-in-law, and accordingly laid it in her lap.

Harriet is Dismayed. Despite her accustomed poise, her hands trembled perceptibly as she took it, and when she had read it through she looked up at me with consternation in her face.

"But this—is—dismaying," she said. "We cannot carry out our plan of meeting them."

Her white face, her trembling hands bolstered the resolution I had taken, but a few minutes before.

"Yes, we can," I said decidedly. "Let me see, when did you wish to go away? You see, I am not being in the least conventional, but that is what you wish, is it not?"

"You know it—you dear!" she said with a warmth of intonation foreign to her. "And we can go at any minute, for, as you know, I am only waiting to see—for that one thing."

"She evidently did not wish to put into words again the thing she so wished to see—a meeting between her husband and Katherine Bickett, which neither should expect.

"If they are coming Thursday, I can arrange to leave Thursday night or Friday morning, as I finished, 'Doctor is getting restive, anyway.' 'That will fit in beautifully,' I said. 'Then I can tell Jack a tarradiddle about your expecting to go on Wednesday, but that you were delayed. That will mollify his royal

She Gives Way. "Suppose you stop right there," I said brightly. "If I could not do this, did not wish to, I would tell you so. Frankly, I am not so certain as to the expediency of this experiment, but it is sufficient for me that you wish it so much."

She stood up to the full height of her magnificent lithe figure and stretched her fine arms above her head with a sudden passionate gesture.

"I know this is a performance worthy of a silly school girl," she said bitterly, "and that you are no doubt repeating to yourself the old adage about there being no fool like an old—"

I went up to her, for once not daunted by her dignity, her air of aloofness, and took her hands, which had dropped to her side, firmly in my own.

"Do you think," Harriet, I said quietly, "that I have never had my own particular Via Crucis to tread and that I cannot understand everything you are suffering?"

She started, looked at me keenly. "Knowing Dicky's temperament, I suppose you have," she said at last. "But oh, my dear, you have the compassion which I never had, which I would give half my life to possess—a child of my own."
