Jail Sentence Means Return to Penitentiary Of Man Out On Parole

The arrest Friday of Harry Mayle, giving his address as 2212 Douglas street, and a subsequent jail sentence of 90 days for petty larceny, means his return to the state penitentiary at Lincoln, Detective Chief Dunn said yesterday.

Mayle is said to have violated his parole. He was released from the state prison a month ago on parole. He had been convicted of automobile stealing, Chief Dunn said.

Detectives English and Cunningham arrested Mayle in company with Thomas Gray, St. James hotel, yesterday for investigation in connection with recent home-prowling robberies. Two suit cases of clothes and jewelry stolen from P. R. Winslow, 2212 Douglas street, were found in their possession, police say. A master key, used to unlock almost any door, was found on Mayle.
