In the next round Delaney fought fundenberg back against the ropes, putting in hard jabs from each hand constantly. Coming out Sudenberg landed a terrific left in the pit of Delaney's stomach, and followed it with a punch that Delaney claimed was a foul. The St. Paul lad withered under the blow.

Delaney showed the mark of the punch after the fight to prove his Referee Denny Ryan allowed both boxers to rest three minutes and then brought them together again for the seventh round. Delaney opened the seventh round, fighting like a wildcat. He backed the Omaha fighter back into his corner with half a dozen hard, fast jabs to the face. Sudenberg clinched and drove home some more of his clinch-punches that evened the round. The eighth and ninth rounds were
