cumstances determining the decision it is doubtful that the majority opinion will stand as the future policy of the court on anti-trust cases. The steel trust decision, therefore, is not likely to be regarded as a precedent in the disposition of other dissolution suits involving the same issues. The dismissal of the suit against the steel corporation by the court was "without prejudice" thus leaving the way open for the reinstitution of dissolution proceedings if the government should find evidence warranting such action.

Long Litigation Ended.

The decision today ended one of the longest litigations in the federal eral control. The act provides that The suit was instituted no ourts. 1911 during the Taft administration and has been pending in the supreme court for several years.

The majority opinion was grounded upon two main points: First, that size of a corporation in itself is not a violation of the antitrust laws. Second, that the steel corporation considering a return to prewar has not exerted its admitted great status on working conditions, not
