CLUBB DOM

THE General Federation of Woman's Clubs through its public health department, is waging a campaign for more public health nurses. Ella Phillips Crandall is chairman of this work. Nebraska has a chairman in the health department, G. F. W. C. Mrs. K. R. J. Edholm of Omaha. A letter recently sent out by the committee on public health nursing says, in part:

"Of all the many classes of women workers who rendered distinguished service during the war, none came through with more credit than the public health nurse. While her sister, the army nurse, was binding wounds behind the battle lines in France, the public health nurse fought the influenza epidemic at home—fought it with an alert competence, and a marvelous devotion for which, indeed, many of them paid with their lives. Nor was the influenza epidemic the only 'major engagement' in which the public health nurse deserved the honors of war—even though she did not always receive them. In the extra-cantonment zone surrounding the great draft camps, in city and country communities, deprived of medical service by the departure of their doctors for service abroad and in tuberculosis and other rehabilitation work overseas—everywhere these tireless workers made themselves so invaluable that Secretary of War Baker, in reviewing the war experience, declared, 'The public health nurse, one of the greatest forces in promoting national health, is needed in greatly increased numbers.' "More public health nurses! The cry comes from all sides—from public health officials, from educators, from enlightened industrial managers. How to supply this big new demand? In seeking to solve this problem—in endeavoring to consolidate into a sound peace program the gains which the war has brought us, it is natural that we should turn for aid to the progressive club women of America.

Health Nurses. Problem: The present supply of public health nurses is entirely inadequate to meet the vastly increased demand which has resulted from the experience of the war and the influenza epidemic. The national organization for public health nursing is working in several ways to remedy this shortage. (1) By aiding in the establishment of new post-graduate courses in public health nursing. (2) By modifying present hospital training school courses so that young women with good educational background—high school or college graduates—can become graduate nurses, qualified in addition to do public health work, in less time than formerly required. (3) By sending literature to student nurses, describing the demand and the advantages in the public health nursing field. (4) By distributing literature to young women—high school and college students—urging the advantages of public health nursing as a profession.

Indian School Girls Learn White Man's Customs From Y. W. C. A.

One-third of the Indians in the United States live in Oklahoma. From the eastern to the western borders of the state you can find red men living in almost every stage of civilization, according to Miss Bertha Eckert, a Wellesley graduate, who has taught in Indian schools for several years and has just given up teaching to work with the Y. W. C. A. for Indian girls in the southwest.

"The most difficult problem we have with the Indian school girls," says Miss Eckert, "is to help her hold herself true to the principles she has learned at school when she returns to her parents' home. In the western part of Oklahoma nearly all the girls come to government schools from homes where their mothers still wear the blankets and follow many of the old tribal customs."

"It is very hard for such a girl when she goes home for her vacation, and often the conditions are dangerous. Tribal dances and other customs, with the increasing use of the drug peyote, are attended with immorality, of which she becomes the victim."

"At school she has many girl friends. She goes back to her home on the prairie, separated by miles, perhaps, from the nearest house, and she is lonesome. At school she has had all modern conveniences and congenial friends. Her little home seems crude and bare and even her mother's ways are strange."

"The problems of the Indian girls in eastern and western Oklahoma are quite different," says Miss Eckert. "In the eastern part the girls come from the 'Five Tribes,' the civilized tribes—Cherokees, Chickasaws, Creeks, Seminoles, Chickasaws. These girls attend the public schools in large numbers and have mingled more or less with white girls. Their home conditions are practically the same as those of white girls and they are less subject to dangers, that often threaten their Indian sisters in western Oklahoma."

"In our Y. W. C. A. work among the Indian girls we hope first of all to teach them how to play and have good times together. Girls from some tribes know nothing of group games and in their homes sit for hours doing nothing. As they become accustomed to mingling with each other we teach them how to conduct club meetings. Through their club work we have to teach them that the Indians have a contribution to civilization, as their folk lore, their wood craft and their traditions. And finally, above all, we hope to have their girls realize that they have a responsibility to their own people and that they should return to them as social helpers and teachers."

Miss Bacon Is a Candidate for High Office

As the general federation biennial to be held in Des Moines June 16-23 approaches interest becomes more keen in the two candidates for the presidency. Miss Georgia Bacon of Massachusetts and Mrs. Thomas G. Winter of Minnesota are the two candidates presented. Of Miss Bacon, a press bulletin from the General Federation of Women's clubs says:

"Miss Georgia A. Bacon, first vice president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, whom the Massachusetts State Federation has the honor of presenting as a candidate for the office of president of the national organization, has a splendid record of achievement, particularly in the home state. She was president of the Massachusetts State Federation from 1908 to 1911 at a time when the state body needed reorganization and building up. This Miss Bacon did most effectively. Prior to taking the presidency she served as fourth vice president for three years, first vice president for three years and as a director for four years, three of which were after her terms as president. She originated the system of state and district conferences for federation departments and these have now become one of the most important phases of federation work."

It was Miss Bacon also who was chiefly instrumental in inaugurating the New England conferences in which federation officers of these six states meet yearly to discuss matters of mutual interest. She was the chairman of the local biennial board at the time of the Boston convention in 1908 and personally appointed 2,000 women on the various committees incidental to that event, a task most difficult save to one having the great gift for organization which Miss Bacon possesses to a marked degree. She was president of the Worcester, Mass., Woman's club for three terms and it was during her administration that its beautiful club house was built. The civil service department of the general federation was organized by Miss Bacon and she was its first chairman. She extended this organization to each of the states and left the work of this committee firmly and permanently established. She planned and put into operation the budget system for the general federation and has always preached the doctrine of living within its income, the income to be interpreted as meaning the money received from dues each year.

As the director of thrift for the general federation which has been her special activity during the past year, Miss Bacon has worked in close co-operation with the savings division of the United States Treasury department and has visited several of the states in the south and middle-west either to help organize the thrift work or to preside at important conferences. She is a member of the various Chambers of Commerce, Boards of Trade and confer with celebrated economists. She recently spent a week in Pennsylvania, which was productive of increased interest in thrift and resulted in Miss Bacon being asked to speak at an all-day open forum under the joint auspices of the Philadelphia Women's Civic club and the Men's City club. At this time she made the closing address, which was said by the press of Philadelphia to have been the most valuable of the day. Word comes from Washington that the government is more than pleased with the work that the general federation is doing under the leadership of Miss Bacon. She is the author of "Thrift in the Home," which is being used in the extension courses of some of the leading colleges and has been requested by one of the big public service corporations for use in the homes of its employees.

Health Department. The health talks to be given during the week at the various community centers at 8 p. m. under the auspices of the health department of the Omaha Woman's club will be on "Child Welfare." Dr. H. M. McClanahan, whose subject will be "The Undernourished Child," will speak at Mason school Tuesday evening. Dr. J. F. Edwards will tell what the city health department is doing for the child, and Dr. T. D. Hamilton will discuss "Child Welfare" at Clifton Hill school Tuesday evening. Literature from the chil-den's bureau will be distributed at the community centers. Dr. Kathleen Sullivan, leader of the health department, says that the women agree with Dr. Charles E. Barker, who spoke to club women Wednesday afternoon, that the hygiene of human life should be taught in the home. "Dr. Barker is a word artist," says Dr. Sullivan.

P. E. O. Officers. At a meeting of Chapter B X of the P. E. O., held Tuesday, at the home of Mrs. A. B. Cullison, the following officers were elected: Mrs. C. W. Southwell, president; Mrs. Elmer Thomas, vice president; Mrs. O. A. Danielson, recording secretary; Mrs. Homer F. This is the formula recently discovered, which not only is as safe as a lotion on the skin, but removes any hair instantly without leaving any evidence whatever of a hair-remover has been used. Wrinkles—How Best
DID you ever notice how a coarse skin, or one with large pores will always show the signs of wrinkling? This discovery points to the secret of removing wrinkles, which has never before been fully realized. By making the pores smaller, a most remarkable result is produced on wrinkles. The pores "brace up," and the skin becomes much finer in texture. This can be done by mentioning the difference in texture between cheesecloth and cambric. By making the pores smaller, the skin ceases to be cheesecloth in texture; it becomes fine and plump as that of a baby. Making the pores smaller, and thereby eliminating wrinkles is quickly done by the simple use of egol. This can be obtained at any drug store for fifty cents. This can be liberally used, as it should be, and proves to be more economical than the old methods heretofore commonly used. Crow's feet, lines of age, sagging of flesh, deep and little wrinkles are all corrected in a very extraordinary manner.

And Here is a New Way to Rid the Pores of Blackheads
THERE is one simple, safe and sure way to rid the skin of blackheads, and that is to dissolve them. To do this get a package of norexin from any drug store for fifty cents—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet sponge—rub over the blackheads, and the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are simply a mixture of dust and dirt, and are secretions from the pores of the skin. Finishing the hair after a short time, and its silky beauty wonderfully enhanced. It makes head washing a positive pleasure, even when and squeezing only causes irritation, make large pores, and do not get them out after the hair is washed. The powdered norexin and the water simply dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out.

No other preparation can produce the exquisite appearance of the hair, which consists merely in dissolving a teaspoonful of egol in half a cup of hot water and applying to the hair like an ordinary shampoo. It is exceptionally rich in the hair like an ordinary shampoo. It is exceptionally rich in the hair like an ordinary shampoo. It is exceptionally rich in the hair like an ordinary shampoo.
