Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Curious Triplets.
 Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: We are triplets of 17 summers. We have yellow hair and hazel eyes. We are considered very good looking and are very popular, but we have our troubles just the same.

We are engaged to three ex-colleagues four years our seniors. We would like to have a triple wedding, but cannot decide upon the date. Could you suggest any way to decide this question peaceably? Should the brides be dressed alike? Should our invitations be together or separate and what form would you suggest? Is it proper for a girl to thank a boy for seeing her home? Our invitations be together or separate? What does R. S. V. P. stand for? Please answer these questions as soon as possible. We remain, TRIPLETS OF 17.

Rather young aren't you to contemplate marriage? However, if you intend to marry, a date must be set. I know of no way in which to settle such a matter for six persons. Each must try to be as amicable as possible. Yes, one invitation would do. Dress alike or not, just as you desire. It is only ordinary courtesy to thank a young man who escorts you. As to how old a girl should be before going with boys, let your mother decide. It depends on the girl.

R. S. V. P. is "Repondez s'il vous plait." It is French and it is translated "Answer if you please."

My HEART, and My HUSBAND

By ADELE GARRISON

I have always known that Katherine was a woman of rare poise and sterling worth. But I never have had half so much cause to admire her as I did during the few minutes which elapsed between the departure of Jack and Mrs. Braithwaite to the garden and their return.

It was a situation to try the nerves of any woman. Yet there was absolutely nothing in her demeanor to indicate that her husband had just indulged in a disgraceful exhibition of his ill humor, and that she expected to be compelled to cut short her planned visit almost before it had begun.

She repeated acquaintance with Mother Graham, talked cheerily to big Dr. Braithwaite, even answered laughingly and with every appearance of ease the sally Dicky sent in her direction. But once when she was near me and knew herself unobserved she caught my hand in hers as it hung by my side, and fairly hurt me with the crushing fierceness of her grasp.

The next instant she had dropped it and was answering fondly my eager questions with which Marion was plying her. Her face was bright and as animated as if she had not a care in the world. But in the depths of the soft brown eyes which make Katherine's face so attractive I read something very akin to heart-break.

The anger I had felt at my brother-cousin's actions changed to puzzled wonder. It was not like the old Jack I had known to bring such a look into the eyes of the woman he loved. Then like a stiletto thrust the question flashed into my brain: How did I know what possibilities of cruelty or kindness Jack might display to the woman he had married? No doubt Dicky's girl friends would never believe that he could possibly hurt the woman he loved in the many ways that, he had since we were married.

The thought was a salutary one, however, the exhibition I had just seen my brother-cousin give still more salutary for me. Woman-like, I never have been able quiet quite to forget that Jack cared for me or imagined he did in the days before he met Katherine. The dramatic scene which he had inadvertently staged in Broquin's cafe when he learned for the first time that I had married Dicky during his long absence was apt to flash up in my photogram gallery of recollections.

Wants Help.

Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: As you have helped others by giving good advice, I wonder if you would help me by printing this in the "Lovelorn" items.

I live on a farm; have two girls, aged 2 and 3 years; will have two hired men this year.

I would like to have a girl, or middle aged lady, to help me with the housework. Would not object to one or two children, if not too young. Will have steady work and pay good wages; would hire by week, month or year. Could start work at once. Help will be addressed as follows: Le V.

We shall keep your address on file and hope some one will answer you.

Inquiring Chums.

Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: We are two chums, 16 years of age, and have been reading your advice to others and like it fine. We have brown hair and blue and brown eyes; we are five feet, three and one-half and five feet two inches high. How long should we wear our dresses? Our complexion is fair and dark. What color to wear would be appropriate?

We have been attending dances lately and have had several chances to dance. Now, what we wish to know is when a boy asks us to dance what should we say? Thanking you in advance, wishing to see this in Wednesday's paper.

ROSE AND PANSY.

Wear your skirts 10 or 11 inches from the floor. Almost any color should be becoming to you. However, dark blues, brown, tan, pinks are pretty for your complexion. When asked to dance say yes or reply that you will be glad to do so.

Dot and Dimple—My shawer to a girl of 13 would be different than to a girl of 21 on some questions. A girl of 13 is too young to be thinking about "fellows" at all, while a girl of 21 is old enough properly to enjoy the society of young men her own age.

Mr. Craik shared in the original production of "Trimpst" and was also associated with Stuart Walker while the play was being written. Simultaneous with the announcement of the second offering of the Folk theater players comes the announcement of the arrival in this country of William Butler Yeats, instigator of the Little theater movement in Ireland.
