Child Welfare Conference.
A public conference, under the auspices of the Nebraska Children's Code commission, will be held Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock, in the city council chambers. "The Problem of the Child Born Out of Wedlock" and "The State, Regulations and Supervision of Maternity Hospitals," will be discussed by a number of welfare workers. All interested in these questions are invited to attend.

Episcopal Women's Meeting.
Mrs. George Biller, field secretary of the Church Missions House, New York, fully explained "The New Church Service League," at the meeting Thursday in All Saints' Episcopal church. The Church Service league embraces the five fields of service, namely, parish, community, diocese, country and world. Mrs. Biller stated that 60 per cent of the women of Nebraska and 75 per cent of the women of Kansas were not members of any church, according to Mrs. W. H. Jones, diocesan secretary. She urged the woman to use their influence against the present day dress of girls in schools and colleges.

Miss Euphemia Johnson, former head of Brownell Hall, now with the Y. W. C. A., spoke on "The Need of Church Women Taking an Interest in Y. W. C. A. Work Among Girls."

Republican Organizer Coming.
Miss Nettie Bauer, a national organizer for the republican party, will arrive in Omaha next week. She is spending one month in Nebraska and is in Lincoln at the present time.

Federation Notes

The Woman's Literary club of Dayton, O., through its Americanization committee has produced and published a play, "Builders of a Nation," written and arranged by Barbara Frances Wedd. It is said to have special value in our evaluation of American history and tradition. It is "concerned with the making of the Constitution." From the play, according to Mrs. W. H. Jones, diocesan secretary, it seems as an historic comment on the making of the league of nations covenant.

The department of literature and library extension of the General Federation of Women's clubs, urges women's clubs everywhere to produce this play for their communities, not necessarily assuming the parts, but taking responsibility for its historic truth and proper production.

The book of the play can be secured from the Committee, Women's Club House, Dayton, O., at a small charge.

Another play that is timely and written for club production, is "Standish of Standish," by Annie Russell Marble, Worcester, Mass. This is based upon the book of that name and faithfully reproduces life in Plymouth during the period of the Pilgrim's greatest hardship. It is suitable in connection with observance of the ter-centenary of the Pilgrim settlement. For permission to act and all details write directly to Mrs. Marble.

Calendar

"Origin and Teaching of the Books of the Old Testament." Mrs. Howard will have as her guests, Mrs. Helen K. Morton and Miss Beulah Hill.

Community Service—Saturday, dance at Girls' Community house, 8:30 to 11 p. m. Girls' Community Service league.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett was earning a small wage as a school teacher in Tennessee, when she began to write. It is said that the stamps with which her first story was sent to the magazines were earned by picking blackberries.

Years later, when the author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" was at the zenith of her popularity as author and playwright, her annual income was estimated to be from $50,000 to $75,000.

Miss Foster will take the place on the faculty of this year's Smith representative, Miss Louisa S. Cheever, who is conducting graduate study in English literature. Her courses for graduate students will be in biochemistry and she will be the first American teacher of science to participate in the work of the institute.

Have Curly, Wavy Hair Like "Nature's Own"

Women who have trouble keeping their hair in curl, or of securing the desired wave effect—especially those who realize the harm that the hot iron does to the hair—will do well to try the new ulmerine method. In no other way they acquire such pretty waves and curls, having all the appearance of "Nature's own." And the hair, instead of being singed, ragged or dead looking, has such a lively lustre and wholesome beauty. The curliness is more quickly acquired than when a waving iron is used, and it lasts considerably longer. When the hair is combed out it is nice and fluffy. The hair will be quite manageable, no matter in what fashion it is done up.

One will get a bottle of plain liquid ulmerine at any drug store and follow the accompanying directions, she will be nicely delighted with the results. The product is of course perfectly harmless and there is nothing sticky, greasy or unbecoming about it. It is also priced at a splendidly reasonable rate. As no special dressing is required at a time, a few ounces will last for months.

My HEART and My HUSBAND

By ADELE GARRISON

The Summons That Came in the Night

The insistent ringing of the telephone awakened me from a troubled slumber in the night following the writing of our invitations to Robert Savarin, a slumber haunted by dreams in which Lillian, Harry Underwood and the artist figured fantastically.

For a few seconds I lay in that transition between sleeping and waking when one's faculties are scattered and need a strong tug to assemble them again. Then I switched on the light, pulled on slippers and bathrobe, and hurried out to the branch telephone in the hall upstairs. It is always my lot to answer the telephone if it rings in the middle of the night. My father's room is too far from it for him to hear it, my mother-in-law's frailty put her out of the question, while as for Dicky, whether walking or sleeping, he pays no attention to either phone or door bell.

"Let 'em ring. It's nothing in my young life," I have heard him say sleepily, regardless of the fact that any sort of emergency might be the cause of the untimely message.

Alfred Durkee's voice came over the phone, agitated, tense.

"That you, Madge? Can you come over right away? Mother's fallen downstairs; I don't know how badly she's hurt, but—"

"I'll be there in a minute or two," I said quickly. "Go back to her."

Dicky Is Startled.

I rushed back to my room, thrust my feet into stockings and tennis shoes, the quickest thing to fasten, drew a skirt and middie over my nightdress, and thrusting my sleeves into a sweater as I went, I was out of my door when I heard Marion's voice in a frightened whisper.

"Has anything happened to mother?"

"No darling," I said quickly, knowing that the quickest way to allay her fears was to tell her the truth. "But Auntie Durkee has had a bad fall, and I am going over to take care of her. Will you take care of Junior if he wakes up?"

"I'll stay awake until you come back," she promised, "but please leave the light on a little, won't you?"

"Surely, darling," I said, "and I'll be back as soon as I can."

As I ran down the hall to Dicky's room I looked at my wrist watch. One o'clock! What had my little neighbor been doing on the stairs at this hour. I knew that unless she had guests for an evening party she always went to bed at about 11.

I rushed into Dicky's room and put my hand upon his shoulder. He sprang up, startled.

"What the devil!" he ejaculated, then with quick alarm, "Junior! Mother! What is it?"

What Alfred Feared.

"Mrs. Durkee has fallen downstairs," I said. "Alfred just telephoned. I'm on my way over. You'd better telephone Dr. Gibson for fear Alfred hasn't had time. I'll tell him you're doing it, then come on."

over. Marion is awake and looking after Junior.

"Of all the rot. How do you know it's serious enough for a doctor. There you go again butting into other people's affairs. Did all ask you to telephone?"

"He didn't have time," I said frigidly, moving toward the door. "But please don't trouble yourself either to telephone or get up. Alfred and I will no doubt be able to manage."

I am afraid I shut the door with more emphasis than was necessary for the repose of the sleepers in the house. But I have seldom been so angry at Dicky as I was at that moment. It was however, but one of a number of similar incidents, and I do not think Dicky is alone among men in his conventional horror of taking the initiative in another family's emergency.

With redoubled haste I went downstairs to the side door opening upon the lawn adjoining the Durkee place. The lock gave me some unexpected trouble, and I lost a full minute before I succeeded in opening it. As I finally swung the door wide I heard Dicky's voice at the telephone upstairs asking for Dr. Gibson's number, and I smiled as I sped across the lawn at the discrepancy between Dicky's "bark and bite."

The Durkee door was locked and I rang the bell. A moment later, Alfred, wild-eyed and with rumpled hair, sketchily attired in a bathrobe and slippers, opened the door.

"She's fainted or something," he gasped, fear and horror on his face, and turning faced for the stairs—again.

When I had reached his side I found him holding the little figure of his mother in his arms. Her face was colorless, but I saw that it was only a faint. One leg was doubled under her, and I judged that she must have fallen upon it.

"I heard her calling to me," he said, big drops of perspiration standing out on his forehead, "but when I reached her she wouldn't let me move her, said the pain was too bad. She made me go and telephone to you, and after I came back she wouldn't be moved. Just a minute ago she went off like this. She isn't dead, is she?"

"Indeed, no," I returned with a mental anathema upon my little friend's stubbornness in refusing to be put into a more comfortable position. "She has simply swooned with the pain. I'll take her feet and help you carry her up to her bed before we bring her to. Then we can take care of her properly."

Special Sessions In Two States Will Ratify

"Only death or dishonor can defeat ratification in West Virginia," was the watchword at national headquarters prior to ratification by that state.

With West Virginia won, and Washington and Delaware meeting in special session March 22, the struggle is over. Of the situation Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National American Woman Suffrage association, says: "People who have followed the course of woman suffrage from the outside with indifference or small understanding of what has been at stake will have no comprehension of the real message which the West Virginia victory carries to women. To us it means that the nation is won, that the 70-year struggle is over, that the women of America are enfranchised women. West Virginia is the 34th state to ratify. The governors of Delaware and Washington have already called special sessions for those states. We know that they will ratify. We are sure that Connecticut likewise will, for good measure. We have come to the end, the attainment, after a struggle which for 70 years has known not a moment's respite. Three generations of women have been engulfed in it and given their best to it.

"Suffrage is won!" "The words are simple but they thrill as few words do or can."

"And now whatever comes out of granting the suffrage to women, it is safe to predict that it will never be responsible for any offering to the general welfare except those things which have been well considered and intelligently endorsed. Suffragists have had a training which few men or women have had, and it has led them to a knowledge of mass psychology, an understanding of the individual, and a familiarity with public questions which few groups of people possess. All this will now be directed toward making the ballot a telling and useful agency for the good of the nation."

Lillian Gish, motion picture actress. Born in Iowa and lives in California. While never having enjoyed stage training or dramatic experience, her work in celebrated picture plays has brought her worldwide fame. Unmarried.

Elderly People Have A Daily Health Problem

Stomach muscles' and digestive organs slow to act as age advances

MOST people find the years slipping by without realizing it, until suddenly confronted with the fact that they can no longer digest everything they would like to eat. It then becomes their daily task to avoid what they know to be chronic constipation.

When exercise and light diet fail it will be necessary to resort to artificial means. Strong physics and cathartics, however, are not advisable for elderly people. They act too powerfully and a feeling of weakness results.

What is needed is a laxative containing effective but mild properties. This is best found in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin which is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin. It acts gently and without griping, and used a few days will train the digestive organs to do their work naturally again without other aid.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has been on the market since 1892 and was the private formula of Dr. W. B. Caldwell, who is himself past 80 years of age and still active in his profession. It can be bought at any drug store and one bottle is enough to last even a large family many months. It is a trustworthy preparation.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, there being over 6 million bottles sold each year, many who need its benefits have not yet used it. If you have not, send your name and address for a free trial bottle to, Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 512 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.
