TEST MINDS ARE "POSERS"

Boston Students Wrinkle Brows Over Questions Asked to Determine Their Mental Alertness.

Booston, March 20.—Can you tell, at 100 per cent speed, whether docile and captious mean the same?

If you can, you are probably all right mentally. That is, if you can answer these posers, and several pages more of other posers, hard as these or even harder. If you cannot answer with facility and dispatch, then it's all wrong with you. For these are the questions which every student at Boston University School of Business Administration is being asked. Under the direction of Dr. Edwin M. Chamberlain, head of the department of psychology, the tests went on, and young business brows are wrinkling as the sheep are divided from the goats. Here follow are answering:

Test A-If a company makes two airplanes a day for six days, how many airplanes does it make in all? There you are for an arithmetical proposition.

Test C-Two words, meaning either the same thing or different, are placed side by side. If they mean the same thing the student under-lines "same," which is printed on the paper. If they mean opposite, why, vice versa. Now eyes open—no napping. Here are the words: Sweet. Sour.—Same. Opposite.

Fat. Stout.—Same. Opposite. Insane. Mad.—Same. Opposite. Fractious. Gentle.—Same. Op-

Civil. Political.-Same. Opposite. Gravely the student reads on his paper—"Actress powder and some-times paint applies," or, yet again, "Snow black all is," or else, "fish a swims."

Is he supposed to restore order to this chaos of a sentence? He is not. He is simply supposed to read said sentence and after reading it, in correct order to underline on the right hand side of the page the word true or false. But the acid test comes with test E. The student is given sentences which he could finish with the cor-rect word. Here is some of the sen-

"Men talk with the ears-hands-mouth-eyes."

Be it announced to all untutored minds that the correct way for any young business aspirant to answer this question is—"men talk with the mouth."
