

MOTHERHOOD WOMAN'S RIGHT

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helps to Make Women Normal.

Washington, Ind.—"I was in such a condition that I never expected to have children, and my aunt advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It improved my health and restored a normal condition of my system so that I now have a fine baby. Until she was about a year old I was very nervous, and all the time thinking something terrible was going to happen. If I heard any one coming, my heart would beat fast and I wanted to run. So I took the Vegetable Compound again and it helped me wonderfully. You may publish my letter, as the medicine is surely great."—Mrs. IVA BANTA, R. R. No. 4, Box 24, Washington, Ind.

Among the virtues of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is its ability to correct sterility in many cases. This fact is well established as evidenced by the above letter and hundreds of others we have published.

In many other homes, once childless, there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Annual Banquet.
Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: Like many others, I shall come to you for advice. I live in a small town and am to be waiter at the annual banquet. What color would be appropriate for the occasion and also what kind of goods? I weigh 125 pounds and am five feet one and one-half inches tall. How would you advise me to have the dress made?

I am 17. Am I too heavy and how much should I weigh?

Just what is your opinion of either public or private dancing? Thanking you in advance, I remain, "BILLY."

Georgette in any light becoming shade or the new figured georgette would be good for wear at your annual banquet. If you want something less expensive you might choose voile. The new fashion books show particularly pretty girlish frocks and it ought to be easy to select a style. With your build choose something simple with long straight lines. A girl of your height at 17 should weigh about 120 pounds. The best people do not attend public dances; the company is too promiscuous and the tone of the gathering is usually not high. Such dances are a great waste of valuable time. If you enjoy dancing go to private dances where the guests are known to you.

G. M.—You should count yourself lucky in having a girl friend whose wise home training and general good sense are shown in her refusal to grant liberties which you have no right to expect unless an engagement exists.

Twinkle—I fear it is too late in life for your ears to be changed. Your writing is better than your spelling. Both could be much improved.

A Reader—Any woman who is willing to do housework can find employment in Omaha. If you need further advice come in and see me.

Anxious—I do not think you intended me to answer all of them. Don't worry about a young man who does not care enough about you to write to you. As for entering the movies, the best thing to do is to go to Los Angeles or some other moving picture center and try to get an appointment with one of the managers. Do not go without your mother, or some other reliable chaperone, however.

My HEART and My HUSBAND

By ADELE GARRISON

The Way Mrs. Durkee Received Alfred's Suggestion.

Dr. Gibson's long, slender fingers manipulated little Mrs. Durkee's swollen foot and ankle as carefully as possible, the while she struggled gamely for composure, uttering no outcry save pitiful little moans when his touch set in motion some particularly tortured nerve. But her face grew whiter and whiter until I was afraid that she would swoon again, and I was glad, indeed, when he finally laid her foot back against the electric warming pad and straightened himself to his full height.

"There's nothing broken," he said reassuringly, "but there's a nasty sprain. Now, little lady, if you'll just put that foot out here I'll fix you up so it won't pain you."

He brought out a queer-looking, queer-smelling unguent with which he gently massaged the foot and ankle, and then he deftly bandaged it in a manner to bring ganglous envy to my Red Cross surgical class.

"There," he said to me as he finished, "just fix this pad so it will keep at medium heat the rest of the night, cover the ankle lightly with something woolly, and give her this a few minutes. She'll forget her troubles until morning, and then I'll be on hand again."

"This" was a pellet which I knew was a powerful sedative, and I saw that the physician had seen the nervous strain under which his patient was laboring, and meant to give her a restful, if drugged sleep.

Doctor Is Firm.

"Wait a minute," Little Mrs. Durkee spoke decisively, and I saw the color returning to her cheeks and lips, knew that the relief of knowing there were no broken bones, as well as the assuagement of pain by the bandaging of the ankle, had given her new strength. "I've got a bushel of tomatoes that simply must be canned."

Dr. Gibson smiled quizzically down at her.

"Suppose we wait to discuss that until tomorrow comes," he said.

"Not much!" she retorted. "I'm going to know right this minute how long I've got to be cooped up here. If you don't tell me I won't take one bit of your nasty old medicine, so there!"

She looked, despite her age, very much like a pretty, naughty, little girl as she glanced up at the physician pointingly. He stroked his chin meditatively for a minute, then a glint came into his eyes which I knew meant his highest adamant mood.

"You have no particular desire to have a crooked, twisted foot for life, have you?" he asked with a snap in his voice.

She looked frightened and answered with a meek little:

"No—but—" "But nothing!" he retorted. "Just let me tell you something straight. You have as nasty a sprain as I've ever seen. It's going to take all my skill and implicit obedience from you to save you from permanent lameness. Mind you, there's no danger of it if you obey directions. Now, will you be good?"

The Silent Glance.
My little neighbor searched his face with eyes in which there was childish cunning. But what she saw in them evidently cowed her, for she murmured in an abashed little voice: "I'll do what you say."

"Then you must not leave this room for two weeks at least, and in every movement that you make you must guard against jarring your foot. It must be protected at all times. Therefore you must have some one either in the room or with call constantly, for you will not be able to help yourself."

"Oh, doctor!" the moan was as genuine as if the pain in her foot had caused it. "All my cunning. But don't say I've got to have a trained nurse. I can't stand that!"

"That isn't necessary," said Dr. Gibson indulgently, "provided you can get some friend or relative with average intelligence and a deft touch to stay with you. I can show such a person in a few minutes everything there is to be done between visits."

"There isn't a soul," Mrs. Durkee said dolefully, looking at me, however, with distinct hope in her eyes. "Nonsense," I said. "You know I can come over for a day or two anyway until we see what can be done. At any rate you won't be left alone."

"Perhaps that Mrs. Ware who does sewing for me sometime," she began when Alfred interrupted, just a hint of sternness in his tone. "I think you're forgetting, mother, that there is some one who will count it a privilege to come and take care of you. I do not think Leila would readily forgive us if in this emergency we did not call on her."

I was glad that Alfred, in embarrassment at bringing his fiancée's name into the conversation, did not look at his mother as he spoke. For such a shadow of resentment and disapproval crossed her face that I trembled for fear she would give it voice.

How Do YOU Use Soda Crackers? and How Do YOU Use Graham Crackers?

Crackers are every-day food for every meal, always ready to serve without preparation of any kind. But there are a good many attractive and economical ways in which crackers can be used, in addition to serving with soup, salads, milk, jam, preserves, peanut butter, cheese, etc.

You know that crackers are highly concentrated all-weather food, without any waste of any kind. So if there are a lot of good ways for using crackers in addition to your favorite ways, why of course, you'd like to know about them. Therefore, we have planned an exchange of ideas along this line.

If you will send us your suggestions for serving or using crackers, we will send you—just as soon as it can be compiled and published—a recipe book containing ALL the good ideas sent in by ALL the ladies who respond to this invitation.

Now please don't delay, but write right away. Just use a postal card—or a correspondence card, if you prefer. Address:
