

FROM POVERTY IN OMAHA TO LUXURY ON TEXAS FARM

Rich Uncle of South Side Widow Moves From Iowa Home—Wills Wealth to Niece.

Unsuspected fortune that will take her from squalid poverty in the heart of the packing house district on the South Side to a sunny farm near Houston, Tex., to spend the balance of her life in comfort and comparative luxury, has come to Mrs. Helen Ellis, 2639 Z street.

Her uncle, J. C. Templeman, of Waterloo, Ia., visited her in Omaha recently and made arrangements for her and her son, Francis, to join him in making their home on his Texas property.

Mrs. Ellis came to Omaha in November from Indianapolis, her home since 1878. She was accompanied by her 23-year-old son, who has supported her by laboring in the baggage room at the Union station.

Crippled by Disease. Anemia and rheumatism have so seriously crippled Mrs. Ellis since she came to Omaha to live that she is hardly able to do her housework, she says.

A false report several months ago that she had been left considerable property by her half-brother, C. H. Templeton of Texas, placed her in communication with her uncle in Iowa. He came to Omaha to visit her.

The uncle owns 320 acres of farm land, said to be worth $500 an acre, and 240 acres of valuable oil land, all located in Texas. He is also the owner of more than 300 acres of farm land near Waterloo, Ia., his home.

Pioneer Live Stock Man. All of this property he will deed to his niece at once, he says, with the understanding that he is to make his home with her on the Texas farm until his death. By the terms of his will, Mrs. Ellis will then receive his cash, which is said to total more than $400,000.

Mr. Templeman is 89 years old, but still far from feeble. He was a pioneer live stock man in Iowa and Nebraska, in which business he accumulated most of his fortune. He has gone to Waterloo to close up his home there and will then go to Texas to make some improvements at the site of his future home.

Mrs. Ellis and her son will not leave Omaha for Texas until fall, she said. They have rented a more modern house at 2016 South Nineteenth street, however, and will live there for the balance of their stay here.

Would Raise Chickens. "I have always thought farm life is the ideal life," said Mrs. Ellis. "I can't tell you how grateful I feel for the opportunity to go to a climate where I may recover by health and be surrounded by such pleasing conditions."

"If I were a multimillionaire, I would still want some work to keep me busy. I would rather raise chickens than do anything else in the world. And now I'm going to do it."

"My son never had a high school education, so now he is going back to school and learn things that will

WRITING EXPERT SAYS PRESIDENT LIKES ADMIRATION

King George Hot Tempered And Queen Mary Proud Of Being Queen.

London, March 27.—Handwriting experts who have just concluded their studies of the calligraphy of world celebrities give the following results:

King George—Hot-tempered, but not vindictive; a strong sense of duty; a calm, even mind.

Queen Mary—Great pride in being a queen; very self-willed; discreet and determined, orderly and careful; her advice worth taking on all practical affairs.

President Wilson—Likes admiration. A careful, precise handwriting, showing caution, love of detail, punctuality and love of order. The even writing of the first name shows that in private life he would be perfectly straight and honorable, but in the manner in which "Wilson" runs off at the end of the word shows great secretiveness in large matters; is quiet-tempered and patient, not of a fighting disposition, but very tenacious.

Premier Lloyd George: Very rare and distinctive signature, full of energy and intelligence, shows a passionate nature, combativeness and ambition; full of ideals, not of possible success.

Mrs. Lloyd George: Careful and rather jealous.

Marshal Foch: Has a good opinion of himself and regard for the opposite sex; great frankness, no intrigue; determined, with a desire for strict attention.

Field Marshal Earl Haig: Very proud; more cautious than Foch; self-confident and determined; with a quiet temper that can be fierce when aroused.

Night Riders Again Sally Forth; First Time in Last 13 Years

Mayfield, Ky., March 27.—The first outbreak of night rider troubles in western Kentucky in 13 years occurred last night when between 200 and 300 tobacco growers from the northern section of Graves county visited the Mayfield tobacco chute and applied the torch.

The renewal of night riding is said to be the result of the fight of tobacco growers of this section of the state against the dropping prices of tobacco. Growers recently organized an association and agreed not to sell their crops on any warehouse floor. Recently 20 McCracken county growers, at the point of shotguns, forced several growers coming to Paducah with their tobacco, to turn back.

Start Courts Martial Athens, March 27.—Trial of men charged with seeking to overthrow the present Grecian government was opened today before a special court-martial. The court ordered that absent witnesses be brought in by force if necessary.

enable him to enjoy in the proper manner the means that will some day be his. I am a good financier, but I will not always be with him. A person must have education to obtain any real benefits from wealth."

Ideals Are Democratic. General Pershing's inspection tour of the country brought him face to face with hundreds of thousands of his countrymen, who learned from close personal contact with him that he is a very human being, that he has a singularly charming personality, that he is extremely democratic in his ideals, that he is ultra-American, that he knows how to meet and how to get along pleasantly with "all sorts and conditions of men," and that, while he has not the graces of an orator, he has a distinct gift of expression—knows how to express an idea so as to "put it across." This excerpt from an address he made urging the people of the American Legion to support the American Legion shows his facility of phrasing his thought tersely:

"The returning soldiers have brought back to the legion a breadth of purpose and a high standard of duty and a solemn vow to uphold and defend the constitution of the United States, to maintain law and order, and to foster and perpetuate 100 per cent Americanism. This creed indicates the character of the men who adopted it. It stands for all that is fine and worthwhile in our citizenship. You will not find among these men any who sympathize with the tendencies toward anarchy, nor will you find any of the 4,800,000 men who trained at home or who fought abroad who will bear the red flag of revolution."

In a brief address to ex-service men at Seattle, he said: "Your organization stands for all that is fine. It stands for God and country and true Americanism."

Human Traits of General Pershing Are Displayed In Incidents of His Tour

Newspaper Accounts of His Experiences in Different Cities Reveal Him as Warm-Hearted, Broad-Minded, Red-Blooded American With Big Ideals.

General Pershing is a many-sided and a very "human" sort of man, as any one must be convinced who reads the stories told of him by the newspapers of the cities he visited on his recent inspection tour of the country. One paper tells its readers that he does not use tobacco in any form, that he does not drink and that he has given up the bad habit of swearing. Another tells of his being a member of the church and of his attending divine worship on Sunday. Another tells of how superbly he dances.

Another tells of his great love for children, of how they are drawn to him, and how he never misses an opportunity to show his love for them. Another tells of his high respect for and of his courtly bearing toward women. Another tells of his reverence for motherhood. Another tells of his "weakness" for pie. Another tells of his going to the wounded soldiers in hospitals, of the keen delight they had in his visit, and of his tender sympathy for them.

Another tells of his fraternizing on terms of perfect equality with men who had been "buck private" in the great army he commanded in France. Another tells of his devotion to his little son, Warren, the only member of the family who survived the terrible fire at the Presidio in San Francisco five years ago. Another tells of his kissing the cheek of the aged mother of a soldier killed in France. Another tells of his taking in his arms and pressing to his breast and kissing tenderly a little girl whose father lost his life in the great war.

Fondness for Sports. Another tells of his leaning over the cot of a little orphan who was severely burned in a fire at Oklahoma City, of the child's story recalling to his mind so vividly the Presidio fire as to bring tears to his eyes. Another tells of his delight in taking in a home in Lincoln. Another tells of his fondness for sports, particularly for a good lively "scrap," and of his chewing gum at the ringside. Taken together, these stories reveal a fine, upstanding, warm-hearted, broad-minded, red-blooded American.

At Chicago General Pershing was met and driven about the city by Santini, a "buck private," who had driven his car in France. "Some man and some general, I'm telling you!" said Santini with a broad grin.
