Lewis Samyen, 5140 South Thir-ty-eighth street, who appeared in South Side police court Monday to answer a charge of abusing his wife, had the appearance of having been put through a threshing machine. His eyes were black, his face scarred and scratched.

Scarred and scratched. When Judge Foster assessed a fine of $10, Mrs. Samyen, who had complained against her husband, slapped down $12.50, remarking that Lewis had better not get drunk again or the next time he would not be able to come to court. Judge Foster said he guessed the right party was punished when the wife paid the fine and the woman laughingly admitted she had trimmed her husband a little, then had him arrested for safekeeping. "Can you beat that?" said Pros-cutor Perry Wheeler.
