

PALMER ORDERS THOROUGH PROBE OF CORN CORNER

Statement Says Any Attempt, Even If Unsuccessful, Basis for Lever Control Act Prosecution.

Chicago Tribune-Omaha Bee Special Wire. Chicago, April 9.—An order from Attorney General Palmer to prosecute everybody whom evidence may show has been implicated in the alleged attempt to corner May corn, now under federal investigation, was received at the federal building today. It was pointed out that any attempt to corner a food product, even if unsuccessful, would form the basis for prosecution under the Lever act.

Indictments are to be sought not only against those who performed the "overt acts" in the alleged corner that precipitated the $4,000,000 crash of Eugene M. Hoynes and company, but against all those found to be in league with or behind the few who actually engineered the deal. Books and records of the largest and most prominent grain brokerage concerns are being carted to the federal building for inspection and will be submitted to the grand jury. Especial attention is being centered, it was said, on the accounts of Herman J. Blum, secretary of the Gardiner Van Ness company and A. W. Cutten, a wealthy Du Page county farmer, both of whom are reported to have had enormous dealings in corn, oats and wheat since January 1, 1920.

At the offices of Hoynes & Co. it was said it will take at least two weeks to complete the audit of the books and determine what can be salvaged for creditors.

BEAUTIFUL WIFE HAS BODYGUARD OF 8 DETECTIVES

Chicago Millionaire Places Four Sleuths in Home—Wife Orders Four Herself.

Chicago Tribune-Omaha Bee Special Wire. Chicago, April 9.—Mrs. Belle Gaertner, beautiful young wife of a wealthy manufacturer, cannot complain that she no longer lacks company in the palatial home. She and her husband had some words on this point, with the result that there is now plenty of company—of a kind—in the house.

There are eight guests, two sets of four each, wide, thick, flat-footed detectives. They have relieved Mrs. Gaertner of all household duties. If the telephone rings, four men, two from each squad, scramble to answer it. Follows then a wordy conference and if they deem it proper, the caller is permitted to converse with Mrs. Gaertner. If visitors come they are met at the door by four detectives and if there is nothing suspicious about the callers they are admitted, but all conversation must take place in the presence of the eight sleuths.

After their quarrel, Gaertner attempted to eject this wife, with negative results. Then he installed four detectives to see that she did not remove any of the furniture or receive visits from certain proscribed persons, in particular, one Edward Lusk.

Mrs. Gaertner countered by employing four detectives from a rival agency, and there you are. The costly Kermanshah rugs bear the imprint of flat hoods and the beautiful mansion reeks with the smoke of flor de cabbios. Both sets of detectives keep a log of the day's proceedings. Two men are always with Mrs. Gaertner, one from each side. If she goes to a picture show, they accompany her, join her in auto rides through the park and camp outside her door when she retires. She can no longer complain there is no company in the house.

Procrastination Is Thief of—Ask Tom, He Knows About It

Tom Dennison has come to the conclusion that an insurance solicitor is not the worst pest in the world.

Tom's home was entered by burglars last Sunday who carried away $1,500 worth of furs, clothes and silverware.

Saturday he was stopped on the street by Ed Creighton, an insurance solicitor, who wanted to write up a burglar insurance policy.

"All right I'll take a policy," Tom said.

"Come right up to the office and we will fix it up right now," Creighton insisted.

"No, I think I better wait until you can come out to the house and make an inventory first," Tom replied.

But the thieves beat Creighton to it.

Says Women Are Climbing Down to Level of Men

London, April 9.—"Women are climbing down to the level of men," Mr. Grant Ramsey declared in a lecture before the Institute of Hygiene.

"I find more of this tendency in the woman's movement than emancipation."

"Where women are up against the laws of nature, nature is bound to win."

"The primary duty is maternity, and if this is evaded there is an end of all things."

"The world has never been so insane as it is today."

"Young men are most affected, but all have come under the influence and the terrible strain of the past few years."

Death House Guard For Nineteen Years Dies

Ossining, N. Y., April 9.—Edward O'Toole, 56 years old, who witnessed more electrocutions in Sing Sing prison than any other employe there, having been for 19 years a keeper in the death house, died at his home in this village.

O'Toole entered the employ of the prison about 30 years ago and in 1900 was assigned to guard duty in the death house. A year ago he was relieved of that task. In the meantime he had been called upon to prepare scores of condemned men for their death and accompanied most of them to the chair. He leaves a widow and two children.

Ends Life After Spree on Bay Rum, Milk and Pickles

Wilmington, Del., April 9.—After a spree on bay rum, milk and pickles, Peter Grant, 46 years old, a leather worker, was found apoplexiated in his home. His wife said she found the window tightly closed and a rug placed in front of one of the doors. She said he had been drinking heavily for several days.

"He had not been sober since last Saturday," said Mrs. Grant. "He began drinking bay rum at that time and drank three quarts. When I left him he was rather wild. "He got up and drank a quart of milk and ate a dish of cucumber pickles I left on the table, and I think he went to the gas stove to make himself a cup of coffee. I don't know whether it was an accident."

In Denmark a housewife is paid about 50 kronen a month in addition to her board and lodging, while a cook receives at least 80 kronen. In normal times these wages are said to be equivalent in Denmark to the same number of American dollars in the United States.

Lovely New Hats Of Unusual Distinction

To span the breach 'twixt Spring and Summer are new Hats, many of which are ornamented with wreaths of field flowers placed on drooping brims. Not to be outdone by picture Hats, flower crowned turbans are now mistily veiled with fine Chantilly or malines. For street wear nothing is quite so chic as a trig little haircloth Hat with fruits and flowers of vivid raffias.

Among the braids featured are the Russian Sipper, Suisse, Visca, Lisere, Leghorn, Italian Milan and countless novelties.

Jade Green is perhaps the latest favorite as to color, due to its adaptability to the needs of sport wear, for let it be understood, this is truly a sport clothes season.
