First Open Air Auto Storage in Omaha Is Ready for Car Owners

For the past few years all large cities in the U. S. have had open air storage and filling stations, to relieve the congested streets downtown.

Omaha is to be no exception, for from now on auto owners can leave their cars, from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m., at Fourteenth and Capitol, the old Ak-Sar-Ben grounds, and be sure of finding them in the same condition as when they left them.

When parking on the main business streets, you are liable to find your car damaged by others backing in and out, articles stolen from it or find that you have violated some parking ordinance.

Twenty-five cents will safeguard your car now during business hours, and theatergoers can park their cars here until midnight, making it convenient as the location is only two

Guesswork Is Expensive In Handling Batteries

"Guesswork puts a great many storage batteries out of business," says Elmer Rosengren of the Nebraska Storage Battery company. "The car owner knows that his battery is not working just right and feels that he ought to do something. So he goes ahead and often does the wrong thing."

"The only safe course for a car owner to follow is to go to a man who knows batteries and ask him to remedy the trouble. It may not cost him anything at all to do so but even if it does it is cheaper in the long run. If everybody would follow this method instead of tinkering with the battery at home the average life of batteries in service would be much longer."

There will also be washracks and a filling station in connection for the convenience of car owners.

There is no mistaking the sincere and enthusiastic endorsement accorded it on every hand.
