WITH "BUGS" BAN

Washington, April 14, 1920. HE first green buds are erupting on the White House links, showing that nature intends to defy both the late frosts and the malignant blight of the president's veto.

The city of magnificent differences is taking on a vernal appearance, artly due to spring and partly due to verdigris. Over in congress new leaves are sprouting in the loose-leaf ledgers. A nonpartisan squint from the visitors' mezzanine reveals an orchard of bald domes nodding in a field of ears. The nodding is not that friendly north and south nod which means "Yes." Through long association with the president's rubber stamp, senators have trained their skulls to say "No" in their sleep. The president is not yet a member of the Senatorial club. The last time he was voted on for membership it looked as if Smith Brothers had dumped their cough drop factory into the hat.

Downstairs in the servants' quarters the representatives have synchronized their nodding with the senate. An oratorical blizzard is raging, with all the wires down between the tongue and brain. An orator is a gent who can stand up all day and talk without thinking. The house is loaded with orators.

Both the senate and the house are trying to break Pantage's grip on refined vaudeville. The senators are introducing novelties into their acts. Jefferson, Webster and Calhoun were mere coolers compared with the modern orator. A cooler is a vaudeville outfit that performs while a red hot moving picture machine is cooling off.

When Senator Bozo speaks now he indulges in 17 minutes of polite patter and then goes into his dance. Senator Shillaber breaks up his tainly has a wallop and is as quick as a flash. If he can bring his weight up to 190 pounds he will doubtless be one of the country's the "Star Spangled Banner" all the patriotic senators rise and stand on the merident's feet The "S. P. Some day the repubs hope to have a war of their own to talk about In the meantime, a substitute serves as well. The war is no secret thanks to the efforts of George Creel's publicity bureau. The only secret about the war is what kind of liniment the president uses on his sprained veto. The democrats started off in 1914 shilling for peace without vic-
