By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.
Double Standard.
G. S. H.: Evidently you believe in one standard for a woman and another for a man. You say the girl allowed another man to kiss her and for this you criticize her. Yet of yourself you say you promised her you would try not to have any wrong relations with women and "have kept my promise remarkably well." What do you mean by "remarkably well?" After telling me this you ask if you should go ahead and marry the girl. Why don't you weigh yourself on the same scales with which you measure the girl. I shouldn't think she would care to marry you if she knew you as well as I do after your letter to me.

Mo Me and Ro Ro.—I would have to see you and talk to you to tell you why you are not attractive to men. What I suspect is, that there is no particular reason. Some girls do not go with boys as early in life as others, but the pleasant, intelligent, sympathetic girl will meet a man of her kind sooner or later. Often it is the finer girls who are not popular with young boys, but they are the ones who are most likely to marry happily when the right time comes. Don't try to be silly and careless in order to attract boys. There is no ultimate happiness that way.

Pretty Maiden.—I cannot tell you how much spending money a girl ought to have per month. It all depends upon what she needs. She buys her clothes, pays out car fare and buys lunches, of course she would need more than the girl who lives in a small town and has none of these expenditures. If your hair has so much oil in it I suggest a good shampoo. Then I think you could wear it in a braid for at least a year yet. You are too young to start going steadily with boys but I do not think it would be wrong for you to have occasional company from your boy friends.

Blonde.—When you have a convenient opportunity ask the young man to call. That is a girl's privilege. Do it politely, so that the young man will appreciate the sincerity with which you ask him.

Freckles. You ask me if your weight and height are right? At least there is no sin in them, and as to their correctness, I can only take your word. You are rather too light in weight for your height. Keep out of the sun and March and April winds to protect your freckles.

Roddier, a returned soldier, Miss Augusta Knight will speak on "Art in the Public Schools." Readings will be given by Miss Edna Florence Barnes, and Mrs. E. O. Ames will sing.
