

TRY THIS ROAD WITH YOUR FLIVVER; IT WAS BUILT BY THE BRITISH ARMY FOR A QUICK DASH INTO AFGHANISTAN AND IS WORTH ITS LENGTH IN GOLD.

Mrs. Vincent Astor drying dishes at the new Victory Army and Navy Y. M. C. A. Club, New York City, which is the successor to the Battery Park Victory Hat. Mrs. Astor presented the club to the service men on behalf of the Y. M. C. A. with a brief speech. After the party, which was held in celebration of the opening, Mrs. Astor gave the boys a hand with the dish-washing. This is a very intimate and unusually fine photograph of Mrs. Astor.

New photograph of Peggy Marsh, former London chorus girl and her three-year-old son Tony, for whom she is suing the estate of the late Marshall Field of Chicago, claiming that Henry Field, grandson of the great merchant was Tony's father.

Floods caused by the overflowing of the Warthe River have added to the hardships of Germans now suffering as a result of conditions brought about by the Kaiser's folly. Here are shown flooded houses and Germans making their way by means of boats.

View of the roads ascending the Khyber Pass, looking towards the plains of India. The upper road is the old camel caravan road leading into Afghanistan. The lower road was specially constructed last year by British engineers for motor transport. This new road is worth its length in gold owing to the hostilities which have started between British forces and border tribes.

Photograph taken on board the S. S. Rochambeau showing Mme. Alexis Carrel, wife of the famous doctor, who returns to New York after serving as head nurse in her husband's hospital at Champaigne since 1915.

Miss Gladys Fraser of Evanston, Illinois, the youngest delegate to the last convention of the National American Woman's Suffrage Association. Miss Fraser is 17 years old.

Photograph taken at the meeting of the Republican State Convention held at Carnegie Hall, N. Y. C., shows Mrs. Arthur L. Livermore, only woman chosen to go as alternate to the coming national convention which opens in Chicago in June.

When Dr. Cary Grayson smiles, all's well at the White House. The photograph shows the Rear Admiral about to leave the White House grounds after his regular morning visit to see the President.
