

NEBRASKANS SEE RELIEF FROM CAR SHORTAGE SOON

Conference in Washington Brings Favorable Comment From Senators on Situation in West.

By E. C. SNYDER, Washington Correspondent of The Bee.

Washington, D. C., May 5.—(Special Telegram.)—Representatives of grain exchanges, chambers of commerce, millers' associations, bankers' associations, elevator companies, live stock organizations and farmers' organizations, in session in this city in response to a call for a conference issued by J. W. Shorthill of Omaha, began their second day's session at the New Willard hotel with a larger attendance than at the initial meeting. It was decided to memorialize the Interstate Commerce commission along the following lines:

First, that an adequate movement of empty cars suitable for transporting grain, grain products and live stock be made immediately effective from all lines holding in excess of their ownership to the territory producing said commodities for the purpose of immediately showing the present and impending accumulation of said commodities.

Second, that an order be entered requiring a systematic return to the carriers serving said territory of the classes of cars required for the transportation of said commodities until said carriers shall have received and shall retain 100 per cent of said classes of cars owned by them; and that the commission make said order to cover such other classes of cars as may in its judgment be necessary to meet any present emergency and future requirement with respect to other kinds of traffic.

Should Loan Funds. "We also believe that the carriers should be furnished with funds to supply themselves with sufficient cars and motive power to meet immediate and future needs. The portion of the $300,000,000 loan to the carriers by congress to be used for equipment purposes is wholly inadequate. Congress should be encouraged to make an adequate additional loan to the carriers restricted to the improvement and in consideration of said equipment."

These recommendations for relief for the whole northwest section of the country will be presented to the commission Wednesday when accredited representatives, appointed, at the meeting today, meet the car apportionment section of that body and are signed by J. W. Shorthill as chairman. In attendance at the conference are some 75 representative business and professional men, including F. A. Brogan, president of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce and representing also the Omaha Grain exchange and the Omaha Live Stock exchange; C. P. Peck, president of the Terminal Elevator Grainmen's association of Omaha; A. F. Stryker, secretary Omaha Live Stock exchange and also representing the South St. Joseph Live Stock association; C. H. Gustafson of the National Co-operative company, Lincoln, and Thorne A. Brown, State Railway commission, Lincoln.

Bankers Have Inning. While the grain men and the live stock men and allied interests were at grips with the car shortage problem, two delegations from the National State Bankers' association were presenting their views to the committee on rules and banking and currency of the house. At the former hearing many of the Nebraska state bankers now in Washington were present, including the committee of the state association, Messrs. Wood Cone of Pierce, C. A. McCloud of York and C. F. Gund of Blue Hill. This hearing was primarily held for the purpose of hearing the views of the bankers on the resolution of Representative King of Illinois, directing the speakers of the house to appoint a committee of nine members to investigate charges of coercion and oppression practiced by federal reserve banks on state banks.

Incident to this hearing, Congressman Reavis, on behalf of the entire Nebraska delegation in congress present, except the senators, made a statement to the effect that, while he did not want to go into the merits of the charges as to the piling of checks, he did want to call the committee's attention to the coercive methods used by some of the representatives of federal reserve banks toward nonmembers' banks and recited the gun play used on officials at Wood Cone's bank in Pierce as an evidence of high-handed injustice and intimidation. Wood Cone told in a very impressive way the manner in which the officials of his bank were held up and made to pay cash for checks that had been held at the Omaha reserve for several weeks. In reply to a question, Mr. Cone said he had never been coerced, but had been "subjected to an attempt to coerce."

Alleged Deserter Is Wounded by Fremont Officer In Gun Fight
Fremont, Neb., May 5.—(Special.)—Police Officer R. J. Sempeck last night shot William Adamson, cavalry trooper from Fort Russell, Wyo., when Sheriff Condit, Officer Sempeck and Special Agent J. C. Ready of the Northwestern railroad attempted to arrest Adamson and Harry Scott, alleged deserters. Adamson's left arm was broken in two places, the bullet lodging in the flesh. The men admit leaving Fort Russell last Saturday night. They reached Fremont by freight early last evening. When accosted by the officers Adamson ran, while Ready grappled with Scott and threw him to the pavement. Both men, the officers declare, drew their revolvers. Army authorities at Fort Russell have been notified of the capture.

An Exceedingly Interesting May Sale Display of DRESSES For the Misses and Small Women COATS

NOTHING answers the every need for general wear like the ever handy suit, and no fashionable woman will lose any time in visiting this timely and extensive suit display. Here are Etons, Boleros, ripple effects and Tuxedo models—suits semi-fitted or severely tailored—all in the most wanted fabrics and colors.

Misses' Afternoon Dresses, a la mode

Exploit the vogue of the picturesque in close-fitting, pointed bodices, and bouffant skirts of taffeta, in charmingly patterned georgette and foulards, and in skillfully draped and embroidered crepe de chine.

Never was Fashion kinder to slim young figures, and never was she more lavish in the variety of her styles. A girl may borrow the wide picturesque skirts and demure little bodices, the frills and laces of her great-great-grandmother, or the simple little trimmed chemise lines of medieval times, the Greek tunic or the basque bodice, whichever best becomes her, and know that she is dressed in the height of the mode.

Such styles are charmingly represented in the afternoon dresses in the Misses' Department.

A Splendid Collection of Spring Coats

For street or business wear, for which these new garments, emphasizing quality in their materials, are admirably suited. They're simple, yet graceful in line, with just the necessary "touch" of trimming to give "character" to the appearance of every wearer.

We unhesitatingly recommend these Coats to women who desire garments of style and service at a moderate cost.

Ever reluctant to give up the graceful lines of the Cape, Missy will be overjoyed at the new models for wear over smart frocks. Voluminous collars, odd drapings and linings of the delightful printed silks distinguish the Capes of 1920. Duvelyn, velours, tricotine and silken fabrics are used in obtaining the Cape's becoming silhouette.

The Gingham Frock Deserves Its Popularity and its important place in the vacation wardrobe. We are especially proud of the models in this showing, for they have that something—in the past only attributed to frocks of sheerer, more expensive fabric—smartness. They are really pretty in their individual styling, with their attractive patterns and snowy organdy trimmings. And they are so very moderate in price that to own several delightful models is no hardship on one's purse.
