Vice President of M. E. Smith & Co. Says Present Move Is Good Business Sense.

In a letter to the sales force of M. E. Smith & Co., C. W. Russell, vice president of that organization, writes the following letter, telling what effect the special sales which the larger stores throughout the country are now conducting will have in bringing down prices of merchandise.

"You have undoubtedly had your attention called to the special sales that are being conducted throughout the country at the present time, particularly to the 20 per cent discount sale, inaugurated by John Wanamaker in New York and Philadelphia, and followed quite extensively by large department stores in other sections of the country.

Spring Has Been Backward.
"The spring season has been unusually backward and the acuteness of the financial situation has had a depressing effect upon all persons engaged in large business enterprises, as well as upon the public at large.

"In addition to this unsatisfactory condition, the first announcement of the mills on products offered for the spring season of 1921, indicated still further advances in prices, ranging from 20 to 40 per cent.

"It, therefore, seems that the public will be confronted again with a further inflation of prices that will bring the price of commodities to the consumer to a still higher level. In view of this fact, it seems to all conservative thinking business men that the time has come to call a halt.

Movement Is Timely.
"The movement started by John Wanamaker seems, therefore, to be timely and patriotic and of good business sense. It serves as a notice to manufacturers and to those in control of the manufacturing industries of the country that there is a limit beyond which prices must not go. It is an effort to stabilize prices and to restore common sense to its accustomed place in business.

"There is some danger that the movement may not be entirely successful and that prices for the year 1921 may still continue to climb and to reach a higher level than exists today, but this, in our judgment, is the only danger in the situation. There is no danger whatever of a general break in prices or any panic or panicky conditions.

"The forced sales throughout the country will liquidate stock now on hand, and to that extent will relieve the financial pressure on the banks. It will also clean the shelves of the retail dealers and send them hurrying to market to replenish their depleted stocks.

"Our hope is that the scramble to replenish stocks will not be too violent that it will again start prices soaring beyond the present level."

ARID IRRIGATION BILL APPROVED BY COMMITTEE

Rights of Way Over Public Lands Are Provided For in Proposed Legislation.

By E. C. SNYDER, Washington Correspondent of The Bee.

Washington, May 19.—(Special Telegram)—Judge Kinkaid, as chairman of the committee on the irrigation of arid lands, was directed by the committee to present a favorable report on his bill, which provides that "when a right-of-way or easement of any kind over public land heretofore or hereafter withdrawn under the act of June 17, 1902, is required in connection with a federal irrigation project the secretary of the interior may execute and record in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county in which the land is located an instrument stating the purpose of the right of way or easement, with a description of the same and the patent issued therefore shall be subject to the right of way or easement so described."

In a letter to Judge Kinkaid, Secretary John Barton Payne of the interior department gives the reasons for this legislation. He says: "The act of August 30, 1890, provides for right-of-way over public lands for ditches or canals constructed by the authority of the United States, but does not include various rights of way and easements over the public lands which are required in connection with federal irrigation operations under the act of June 17, 1902, such as rights of way and easements for necessary roads, telephone, telegraph and transmission lines and similar structures and for floatage and seepage easements in connection with reservoirs.

"It is frequently desired to restore to entry public lands which have been withdrawn under the first form for irrigation works under the act of June 17, 1902, could we retain the right later to use certain portions for the purposes above set forth, but at the present time there seems to be no practical way to retain such rights excepting by continuing large areas of lands under withdrawal and thereby preventing all entry thereon."

The secretary then suggested a short form of an amendment which Judge Kinkaid adopted, which preserves to the United States all needed rights and at the same time permits the opening of considerable areas of withdrawn lands to entry without loss to the United States or its irrigation projects and with much benefit to entrymen.

Washington, May 19.—(Special Telegram)—The marriage of Miss Hazel Norris, second daughter of Senator George W. Norris of McCook, Neb., to John Robertson of Broken Bow, Neb., took place this morning in the Norris home in Cleveland park, Rev. J. McBride Sterrett officiating. Only a few immediate members of the families were present, as the marriage, which was not expected to take place until next fall, was arranged hurriedly because of a trip east which the bridegroom was obliged to make.
