

One of the freak fish brought up by a steam trawler. The hauls are made by means of "Otter boards" which are attached to nets and are dragged at a depth of from two to three hundred feet. The distance between boards is 150 feet. They are hauled up every hour with five or six thousand pounds of fish in them.

SOMETHING TO DRINK IN HAVANA SOMETHING TO SHOOT IN ESTHONIA

(Photos by Underwood and International.)

In Switzerland you can climb into your plane and in a few moments be sailing through the air thousands of feet above the highest snow-cold peaks. Picture shows a plane from Saint Moritz flying above the top of the Alps.

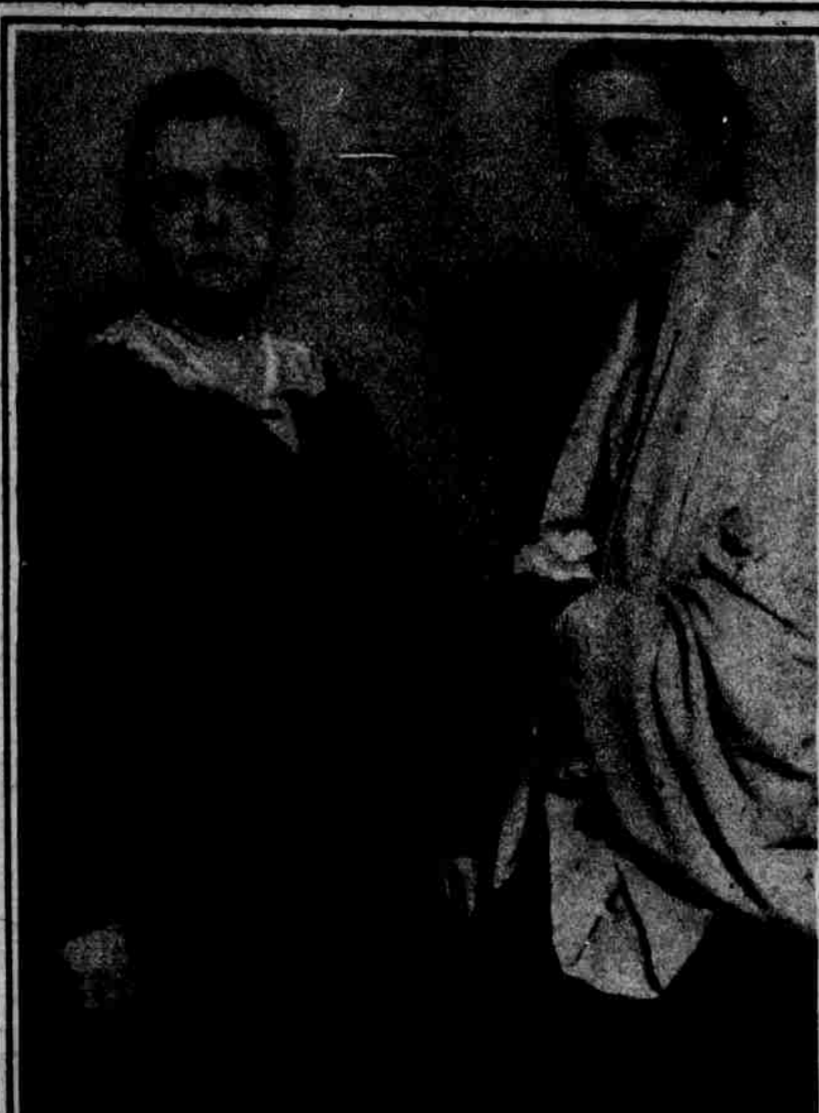

A British Peer and his wife spending the winter in Havana. Lord and Lady Alastair Leverton Gowar London sipping their favorite beverage in a Havana hotel.

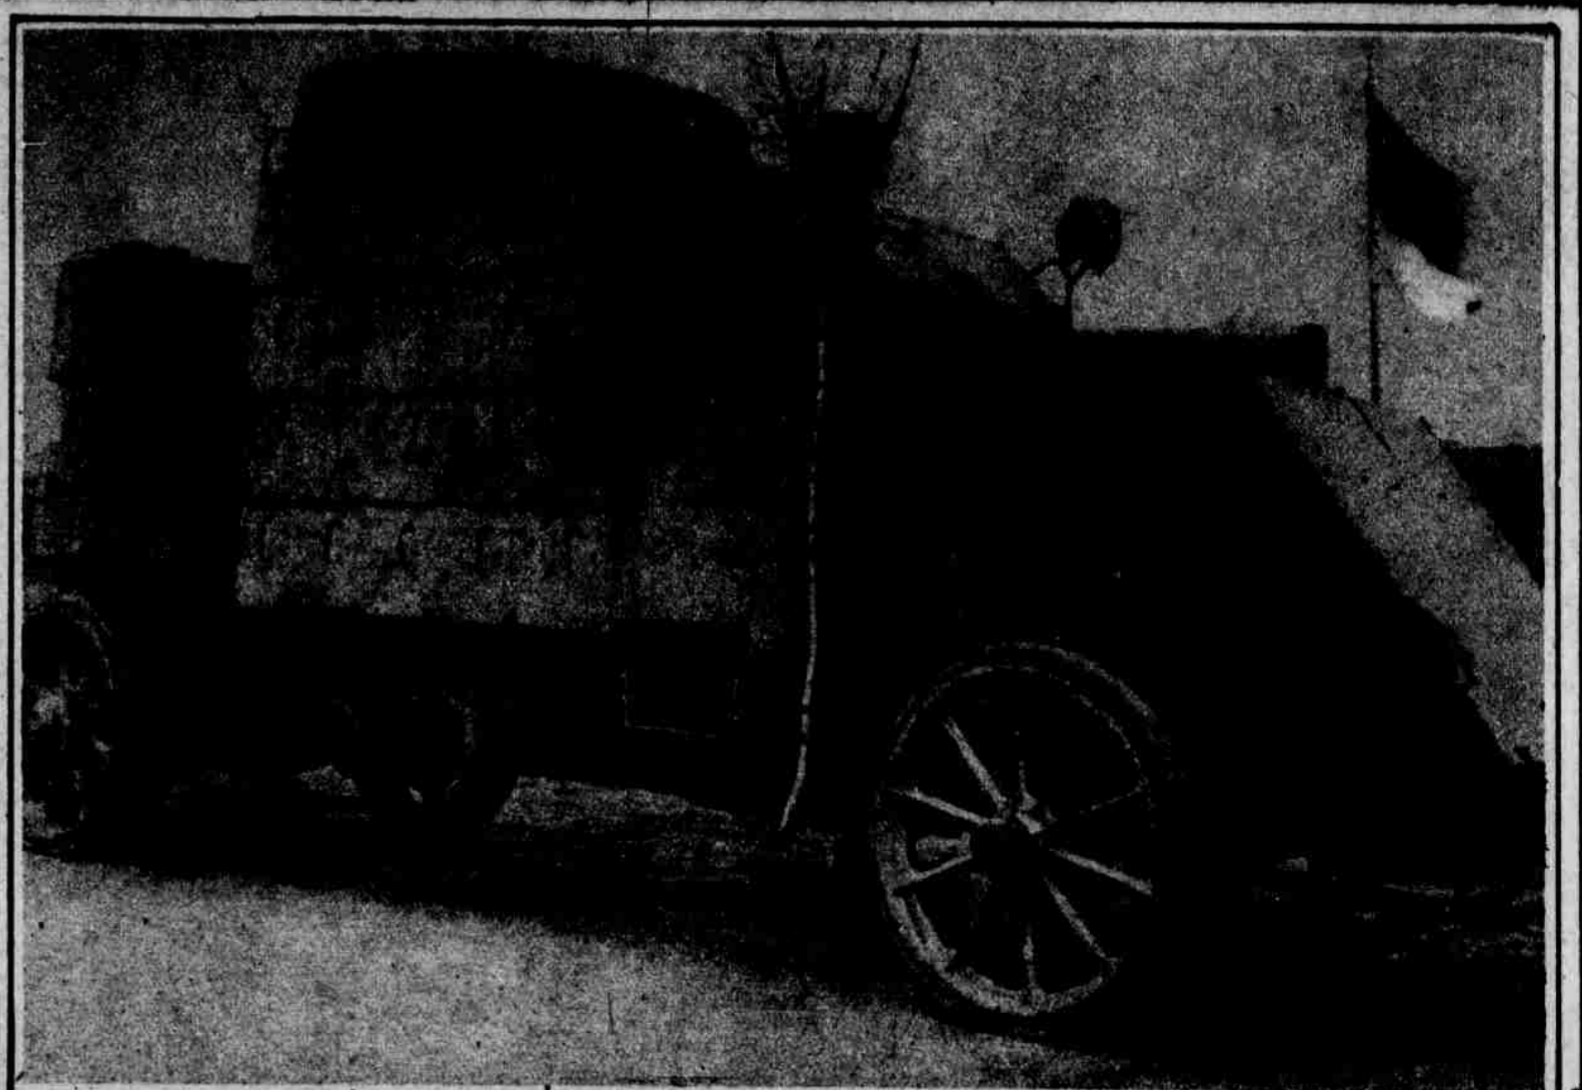

From Switzerland comes this picture of Marshal Joffre, the centre of attraction at one of the winter resorts in the Alps country. "Papa" seems to enjoy the attention of his admirers.

A factory worker of Japan addressing a mass meeting with her baby strapped on her back, all a part of a big suffrage meeting.

Dr. Catherine Davis and Miss Alice Stone Blackwell at the 51st Annual Convention of the National Women's Suffrage Association.

No, the Esthonians do not, most assuredly do not, like the Bolsheviks. Just to prove it here is a picture of an armored motor car built expressly for the purpose of thinning out the ranks of the fanatics.