HOLDING A HUSBAND Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

What Madge Demanded of Lillian and Allen Drake. Neither Lillian nor I gave any heed of justice to the delicious dinner which Betty served following the "clicking soup," over which she had been so temperamental.

I watched my friend furtively, decided that she was palpably distraught, and that the cause of her worry was not herself but me. The knowledge naturally didn't increase my peace of mind, and I had an anxious time of it trying to conceal my own agitation and lack of appetite from the keen eyes of Allen Drake.

He, however, in true masculine fashion, was too busy at first, discussing the friends served him to pay much attention to anything else. I knew that he had dined at every restaurant of note in the world, that he was a critical judge of things culinary, and his absorption in his dinner was a high tribute to Betty's cooking—a tribute, however, which Lillian's guests always pay her.

"You aren't eating your dinner," he said, and I felt his gaze steadily upon me. "Why?"

Allen Drake's Question. "I think you are mistaken," I returned a bit wearily—I was tired of the game I had been playing even so desultorily, and wished that Mr. Drake would take himself and his fascinations and vanity and chatter on the globe except in my vicinity—but I lunched late and heartily, unfortunately, when one considers Betty's dinners. But you see, I didn't know I was to come in here until after luncheon.

"Nevertheless," Mr. Drake continued, "you really should try to eat something. A late luncheon shouldn't mean anything to a healthy young woman like you. Sure you're not worrying about something?"

Lillian's attention was for the moment distracted with a direction to Betty, who stood at her elbow. Mr. Drake's question was a murmured one, and for a moment I thought it was simply a continuation of the little flirtatious game which I suspected he had been trying to play. But as I looked up at him I saw that all lightness had gone from his manner. He was serious. He was serious, and I read in his eyes the same flash of pity that had so alarmed me in Lillian's.

I haven't the same control over my face and eyes as is possessed by Lillian and Mr. Drake, and I do not know what of terror or other emotion may have been written upon my face. But Mr. Drake put out his hand with a quick, involuntary motion, covered for an instant my own, which I now saw was visibly shaking, and released it as quickly.

"You poor child!" he said softly, "I thought so. Now listen to me. 'Don't do it, Madge.' Lillian interrupted with a note of gawdety in her voice that I surmised was forced. 'I'm the party who's the official listener around these diggings. Come on, let's adjourn to the library. Betty will bring the ices and coffee up there."

I went upstairs with much the feeling of a criminal going to execution. Lillian's wonderful brown-toned library has been the scene of many of the dramatic moments of my life, some of them terrible experiences, which have left indelible prints upon my memory. It seemed to my over-strained imagination that going to this room was a distinct presage of evil, even though my common sense told me that it was Lillian's invariable custom to have her dinner coffee and dessert served there or in the white and crimson living room.

And when Betty had removed the service I turned to Lillian with every shred of self-control torn from me. "Please don't keep this farce up any longer," I stormed. "Something has happened, and you're trying to prepare me to hear it. But I must know this at once. Has it anything to do with Grace Draper?"

THE BEST ON EARTH

Says Mrs. Staples of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Taunton, Mass.—"I could not eat or sleep for six months, had fainting spells and could not walk without help for three months, caused by female trouble. My cousin, who was a doctor, told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped me greatly. Then during the summer of 1919, I was again afflicted with the same trouble. I had used the same remedy. I am seventy years old now and am able to do my own housework and walk one mile to church every Sunday morning and evening. I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to my friends having the same troubles as I had. Your remedy is the best on earth. I cannot find words to express my gratitude to it.—Mrs. SUSAN C. STAPLES, 187 B. School St., Taunton, Mass.

The reason for the change of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and illness such as displacements, inflammation and ulceration. Why don't you try it!

Life I used the same remedy. I am seventy years old now and am able to do my own housework and walk one mile to church every Sunday morning and evening. Fitting Feet Is Now a Real Profession

Perfect foot-fitting should combine a balance of comfort and style. Fitting feet is a profession. Shoes are no longer sold without being fitted, the time of no fitting belongs in the past.

If a person should strike you, you could have him arrested, but if an incompetent shoe clerk should fit you wrong, cripple you for life by giving you a bunion, what can you do? "SUFFER."

Shoe customers are seeking professional services, therefore it takes more than a clerk who sells shoes by the hand-out method—it requires a professional sales person. Shoe-fitting requires salesmen who have made a special study of the different feet, taking care of each foot according to its individual requirements.

The most important question in a shoe store is, How many pairs do you fit properly. When this question is answered satisfactorily, confidence in your store is established, which spells success.

HOW TO RAISE BABY CHICKS

Put Avicol in the drinking water.

Most people lose half of every hatch, and seem to expect it. Chick cholera, or white diarrhoea is the trouble. The U. S. Government states that over half the chicks hatched die from this cause.

An Avicol tablet, placed in the drinking water, will positively cure your little chicks from this disease. Inside of 48 hours the sick ones will be as lively as any other chicks. Avicol keeps them healthy and makes them grow and develop.

To do this get a bottle of Fresca Hair Remover Lotion from your druggist, apply a little with the finger tip, or with a little cotton, just like you would a face lotion, to the hairs not wanted, in a few minutes wash off and you will be surprised how the hairs have disappeared.

Fuzzy or heavy hairs simply dissolve and leave the skin soft and white—shaving and other methods only remove hairs for a short while and they come in thicker than ever, while Fresca Hair Remover lotion dissolves them away below the skin and weakens the growth. If you are troubled with these unsightly blemishes you should try this simple and safe method of getting rid of them.
