Pavement Tennis.
FRANCIS ROLT-WHEELER.

There isn't a game which is better for a fellow than tennis, but everyone hasn't got a tennis court and the fixings. In the city, especially, unless one is a member of a club or a Y. M. C. A. or something of the kind, or unless one has friends who have a court, it is difficult to get a game.

Every couple of fellows, however, can get a piece of chalk, a tennis ball, a back-yard, or a side street where there is little traffic. On a piece of hard dirt road the court can be marked with white stones.

The dimensions of the court should be 32x16 feet, and should be marked like a tennis court for singles.

If doubles are to be played a line four feet wide should be run parallel to each side, making a court 40x16.

The rules of the game and the

The All Round Girl Red Cheeks and Pop

Whoa, There!
By Mollie Price Cook.

"They just had thousands of candy eggs at the party!"

"Oh, yes, and I ate six pieces of cake and hundreds of dishes of ice cream!"

"Whoa! There, girls, how many did you say? When you get into the hundreds and thousands, you're going some!" Mr. Smith smiled as he said this, and passed on.

An exuberant girl finds it hard to check herself. The other day a prominent man said:

"The modern girl tells things in utter disregard of fact. And if she isn't exaggerating, she is bragging about herself."

"Girls! Girls! Girls!!! Is this man right? Will you be responsible for such criticism? It is true that exaggerating is as bad as lying. The English language is good enough to express anything you wish to say."

scoring are the same. The principal difference is that no rackets are used. The ball is a tennis ball from which the cloth cover has been ripped off—an easy enough thing to do, if the stitches that sew the 8-shaped pieces of cloth together are cut with a pair of nail-scissors. This makes the ball lighter and quicker on the bound.

A hard smash to the ground will make the ball jump about ten feet, and a low volley will skin along the ground in a fashion that's hard to answer. Be sure that the central line, which marks the net, is very clear and easy to see. That will prevent disputes.

Pavement tennis on a summer day is not child's play. There's as much fun in it as tennis, and as much action in it as hand ball. It's a good thing to have a swimming hole or a swimming pool near at hand, to jump into, half an hour after the game. You'll need it. Don't jump in at once, when you're overheated, or you're inviting erysipelas. But for real, fast sport which any fellow can get at without the cost of joining a tennis club or the buying of all the paraphernalia, take pavement tennis.

WHY?—

Are Lead Pencils So Called? Copyright, 1920, by the Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

The obvious answer to this question would be, "Because they have lead in them." But they haven't. The writing material in the "lead" pencil of today is graphite, not lead. But there was a time, before the discovery of the famous graphite mine in Cumberland, England, when metallic lead was used inside a wooden holder or shield, and the name persisted even after the lead itself disappeared.

After large deposits of graphite were located in England in 1565, that country had practically a complete monopoly of the lead pencil industry for some two hundred years. In fact, it was not until 1761, when Caspar Faber opened his pencil factory at Nuremberg, in Bavaria, that Germany took the lead in the making of this product. The establishment of the tariff which went into effect in 1861 made the importation of lead pencils into the United States a very expensive operation and forced a number of manufacturers to establish plants in this country. American inventive genius perfected many of the machines which made the pencils and today the United States supplies at least 90 per cent of the pencils used on this side of the Atlantic and a considerable proportion of those which are utilized by the world at large. The graphite comes principally from Ceylon, Mexico, Bohemia and Siberia, while the red cedar wood is obtained from Florida, Alabama and Tennessee.

Tomorrow's Question—Why do we speak of a "porter-house" steak?

HAYDEN'S

THE CASH STORE
A STRIKING OBJECT LESSON
A Business Talk by J. Hayden.

Omaha, Neb., May 26, 1920.
Several days ago an old-time resident of Omaha visited Hayden's furniture department and selected a bill of furniture amounting to $567. When the bill was completed, this gentleman said to the salesman: "Now, I will take that if you will give me the long discount."

The salesman replied: "All the discount possible is made at the time prices are fixed under Hayden's cash plan."

The prospective purchaser asked: "But how do you expect to compete with unusual reductions?"

"We have no fear," replied the salesman, "of a comparison between Hayden's goods and prices with those offered by any other store in any section of the country. Of course, I am anxious to sell you this bill of goods and I suggest that you make a visit to other furniture houses and, comparing goods and prices, buy accordingly. I think you will find that under any circumstances you could do, at least, as well at Hayden's as at any other establishment in the United States."

This customer acted on the suggestion. He inspected goods and prices offered by several other furniture dealers.

The following day he returned to Hayden's and gave his check for $567 for the goods selected the preceding day.

Unquestionably, this customer was surprised at Hayden's ability to meet any competition so far as quality of goods and prices are concerned through the normal prices fixed under the Hayden cash plan. But when he was shown what vast sums of money were saved to Hayden's customers under the cash plan, he readily understood.

Others who investigate will understand, also.

Accepting the invitation to "come and look," they will "come and buy," for the simple reason that Hayden's cash plan provides first-class goods at the lowest possible prices.

That explains why there are so many well satisfied customers thronging Hayden's counters these days.

TWIN STORIES BY LUCY FITCH PERKINS

Japanese Twins Go for a Ride.
The twins were just stepping into their clogs when the front gate opened, and what do you think they saw! In came trotting three brown men, each one pulling a little carriage behind him! They came right up to the porch. Take was just standing on one foot, ready to slip her other one into the strap of her wlog, when they came in. She was so surprised she fell right over backward! She picked herself up again quickly, and hopped along, with one shoe on and one shoe off.

"Are we going to ride?" she asked.

Her father laughed. "Yes, little pop-eyes," he said, "we are going to ride to the temple, and you and Taro shall ride in one rickshaw all by yourselves."

The name of these little carriages drawn by men instead of horses is "rickshaws," but he called them "rickshaws" for short.

The twins were so happy they could hardly keep still. They looked

There were so very many interesting things to see that the twins didn't talk much for a while. You see, it's hard work to use your mouth and eyes and your ears all at once. So the twins just used their eyes.

It was still quite early in the morning when they reached the city streets. Here they saw men with baskets hung from poles going from house to house. Some were selling vegetables, some had fish, and others were selling flowers, or brooms.

They saw little girls with baby brothers on their backs, skipping rope or bouncing balls. The baby's head wobbled dreadfully when his little sister skipped, but he didn't cry about it. He just let it wobble!

Tomorrow—Japanese Twins Ride to the Temple.

I'M THE GUY!
I'M THE GUY who snores in the Pullman sleeper.
I wait until everybody's just dropping off to sleep, and then I begin.
When I get everybody so nervous and irritated that they're wide awake, I stop for a while, and then when they're all quieted down again, I start snoring some more. By the time they're used to my style I change it. If I've been snoring a rolling bass, I shift to a staccato tenor, or if I've been starting in with a groan I try ending up with a whistle. Sometimes I gurgle in between. The variation always gets 'em.

I can snore for hours without tiring. And in the morning I'm the most rested person in the car. While the others have been paging the porter for cotton to stuff in their ears I've been soundly sleeping.

I do my best snoring on my back. I should bet that way too, so why should I sleep on my side? Besides my snoring never keeps me awake so why should I worry about it?
