HOLDING A HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

What Allen Drake Promised Madge.

I had started both Lillian and Allen Drake by my question. I knew this by the quick glance of inquiry they threw at each other...

Lillian was the first to speak. "What has Grace Draper into your mind, Madge?" she asked quietly.

There was neither assent nor negative to my stormy question, simply the quiet query, but I knew at that moment, I think, that my fantastic fears were confirmed.

"Because I saw her, or somebody who looked just like her, getting into a limousine at the Pennsylvania station tonight."

Again the startled exchange of glances. It was Mr. Drake who spoke next.

"Did this woman who resembled Miss Draper see you?" he asked, and despite the quiet composure of his voice I fancied I detected a note of anxiety in it.

"No, no," I returned impatiently, "but all this is beside the main question. Is she out of prison—free to make my life the torment it used to be?"

I am not particularly proud of my behavior in this instance. And I am sure my voice must have sounded hysterical. At any rate, Lillian rose quickly, crossed to my chair, knelt protectingly beside me and took my hand in hers.

"Surely you're not going to be anything but your usual brave self no matter what has happened, are you, Madge?" she whispered in my ear.

How well she knows me. I feel sometimes in my reflective moments as if Lillian when she wishes to lay upon my mind and heart as she would upon the keyboard of an instrument with which she was familiar. And she again had struck the right note with me. I couldn't play the craven with Lillian's voice sounding that slogan in my ears.

In Full Command. I straightened myself in my chair and looked at her steadily.

"I am ready for whatever is before me," I said slowly. "But you must answer my question first. Is Grace Draper freed from prison?"

"Yes, she was released two days ago," Lillian answered slowly, pitifully.

I saw nothing, heard nothing for the next few seconds. I know that my fingers were clenched into my chair, and felt Lillian's arms clasp me closely. I had one overwhelming thought, that I mustn't cry out, but must hold myself steady to face this terrible thing which had come to me.

For this confirmation of my fears had also completed the realization of what Grace Draper's release from prison would mean to me. None knew better than I the "ancient grudge" she bore me, and I doubted not that she would "feed it fat" at the first opportunity.

With Grace Draper free I never again would know a moment of peace or safety. For I should never know from what direction or in what way her vengeance was coming. I could only be sure—knowing her as I did, knowing also how intense was her hatred against me—that she would endeavor to harm me in some way. Whether her revenge would take the form of an attempt at physical injury to me and mine, or whether I should suffer from the more subtle injuries to my peace of mind, of which she was past mistress, I could not tell, and the uncertainty was an added terror.

An Attractive Watcher. I think the first thing outside of Lillian's protecting arms of which I was conscious was the sight of Allen Drake's face. He stood by the fire place, motionless, watchful, his demitasse of coffee held rigidly in his hand halfway to his lips, evidently arrested by his interest in my reception of the news. I remember thinking—as one will observe something trivial in the most tragic hour—that almost any other man would have looked supremely ridiculous in such an attitude. But he, curiously enough, lost none of his dignity in either the posture or the quick movement with which, when he saw that I was looking at him with realization and consciousness in my gaze, he put the cup on the mantel and came toward me.

"I knew you could do it," he said and there was distinct admiration in his tone. "I knew what a blow this must be to you, and I must express not only my sympathy but my admiration for the way you are taking it. And let me tell you this, while that woman is a menace, of course, yet her venom shall never reach you if I can prevent it, and I think I can."

DISAGREEABLE TASTE IN MOUTH Stomach Was Out of Order and Head Ached, So Kentucky Man Took Black-Draught. "It Cured Me," He Says.

Nancy, Ky.—Mr. Marion Holcomb of this place says: "For quite a long while I suffered with stomach trouble. I would have pains and a heavy feeling after my meals, also a most disagreeable taste in my mouth. If I ate anything with butter, oil or grease, I would spit it up. I began to have regular sick headache. "I had used pills and tablets, but after a course of these I would be constipated. It just seemed to tear my stomach up. I found they were no good at all for my trouble. "I heard Theford's Black-Draught recommended very highly, so I began to use it. It cured me. I keep it in the house all the time. It is the best liver medicine made. I do not have sick headache or stomach trouble any more." When suffering from headache, constipation, stomach or liver trouble, try the old and well-recommended, purely vegetable, Theford's Black-Draught. Just as Black-Draught brought relief to Mr. Holcomb, so it also has to thousands of others, and should help you, too. Insist on having the genuine.

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to very eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place. Because of its germ destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness. You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.
