To Bid Good-Bye to Popular All-Day Sucker

> Unkind landlords and harsh truant officers are not the only members of a brigade composed of foes of the joys of children. Candymakers have now confessed that the day of the all-day sucker, the licorice stick and the lollypop that used to sell at the rate of a handful for a cent is about over, due to the high cost of materials and sugar.

Bonbons and similar confections will continue to be plenti-ful, put up in beautiful boxes for the grownups, the candymakers say, but this means little to the children.
