spite its dullness. A national convention of one of the major parties usually exercises a kets and there was small reason for supposing that the republican convention this year would be any exception. There was a fairly radical element in the party which, it was he is attired in khaki in the opening feared, would make trouble, with the possibility of its gaining some sub-stantial successes before the convention was over. Then, too, there was the possibility of "planks" being inserted in the platform which would prove embarrassing to business.

As the week progressed, the unfavorable features continued to develop. From a market point of view the higher rates for call money were not pleasant to contemplate, and the announcement of an issue of treasury certificates at the unprecedentedly high rate of 6 per cent certainly seemed to lay at rest all hope of "easy" money for some time to come. Then there was the collapse of the silver market and the demoralization of Chinese exchanges, and, in the railroad field, there was the totally unexpected toduction of both the common and preferred dividends of Chicago and Northwestern followed by prediction that some of the other roads with long dividend-paying records would have to follow suit.

Favorites Strong. prove embarrassing to business. Favorites Strong.

But the market steadfastly ignored these things. The industrial favorites were strong at all times. It was only in the small day-to-day turnovers that the real professional character of the situation was disclosed.

The theory that an advance in the rate of interest on treasury certificates means an automatic readjustment of prices on other government securities and of investment securities in general might be unassaliable if previous certificatea issues were still being "pegged" at par, which they are not. Following the amnouncement of the new certificates, there was some selling of liberty bonds and some liquidation of other investments, but how much of this could be attributed to the higher certificates rates and how much to other causes is an open question.

Increase Interest.

Increase Interest. The treasury for many months has een below the money market; has been four corner bedrooms, each with closet, and tile bath, second floor; white enamel finish; full cement basement, with brick, foundation; lot 48x120; one-half block from Harney car. War bonds did sell off following the announcement, but they recovered again, and neither the decline nor the recovery amounted to much, and neither could be traced directly to any one cause. War bonds are seeking their natural level, whatever it may be. Those who argue that the efforts of the treasury to get abroast of the money market are hurting other securities, are confusing cause and effect.
