

TWO BURGLARS GREETED WITH STREAM OF LEAD

Blond Drops Show Detective Wounded at Least One of Prowlers Who Sought To Kill Him.

No trace has been found of the hiding place of the two robbers who are believed to have been shot Thursday night by Lloyd W. Longnecker, private detective, 4428 South Twelfth street.

Longnecker says he is confident he wounded the men when he saw them attempting to enter his home. He was sleeping on the front porch of his home when he heard the robbers in his home. Seizing a .45 caliber revolver, he crawled on his hands and knees to the front door. He saw two faces silhouetted against the screen. He shot six times at the men. Longnecker said he heard one man fall, get up and stagger toward a rear door.

Steps of both robbers were traced to an alley by blood drops. Detective Longnecker informed police that he knows both men. He said they are attempting to take his life because of his connection in a recent lawsuit when he obtained evidence against them.

Mrs. Arthur Hanning, mother of Mrs. Longnecker, 4438 South Twelfth street, was awakened by the first shot fired by Mr. Longnecker, she said. Hastening to the Longnecker home, she saw a young man fall with a thud and moan, she said.

Another man dashed from the side of the house and carried the wounded victim to a waiting automobile, Mrs. Hanning said.

Mrs. Hanning told of threats she heard that two men would kidnap the two Lonecker children, Geoffrey, 3 years old, and Jeanne, 5 years old.

Holding a Husband Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

What Happened When the Little Trunk Was Opened.

For a long moment I stood motionless watching my father's tense figure clasp the little trunk in his arms, his face bent toward it. Then I went up to him again and put my own hands over his as they held it.

"Shall we open it now?" I asked quietly.

He started and trembled, almost as would a child who had been struck. Then, as if bringing himself back by a mighty effort from some distant place where his soul had wandered, he put the little trunk down upon the table and turned to me with a resumption of the poise which had completely deserted him at his first sight of the memory-haunted thing.

"I must crave your pardon, dear," he said with the dignity which always invests him. "I completely lost control of myself for a moment or two. I had the feeling almost as if—

as if—

His voice trailed off into silence. Over his face crept again the rapt look I had seen when he first took the trunk into his arms. I spoke again, as much to still my own nerves, quivering with the perception of the elusive uncanny emotion which was swaying him, as to recall him to consciousness.

The Top Layer.

"I—I know, father," I said softly. "He brought his eyes back to my face let them rest there.

"Do—you—feel—it—too?" His voice was a whisper.

I brought myself back to sanity with a jerk. I didn't know to what lengths this obsession of my father's might carry him, and felt the necessity of injecting a touch of commonplace into the situation.

"No," I prevaricated, with almost a curt air. "Where is the key for this?" I asked the question of myself, then answered it as quickly.

"Oh yes, I remember now," I went to my desk, and from a drawer took a small keyring holding only the keys of the things which I don't need to open often. From it I selected an old brass key and put it into my father's outstretched hand. His fingers trembled perceptibly as he took it, and it was with a reverent air that he inserted it in the lock, turned it and threw the top of the little trunk back.

I knew, of course, what would meet our eyes—packages and packages of letters, closely tied together so as to occupy the least possible space. There were other things in the bottom of the trunk, mementoes of my mother more precious than letters, the inlaid lock box which had been my grandmother's, and which, with its contents, I meant to show my father when we should come to it, but the packages of letters composed the entire top layer.

They were the letters my father and mother had written each other in the days before their marriage and in the early years of their marital life. Why my mother had kept them after the tragedy that ended happiness for her I never could fathom. I fear that I should have burned every scrap of writing, everything which brought back to memory the thing that had happened.

But kept them she had, and the

WOMEN NEED NOT STAND IT

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Surely Removes Suffering and Pain. Here is Proof.

St. Paul, Neb.—"I suffered with periodical pain for about four years so that I was unable to do my work at times. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it. It soon stopped all my suffering so that I am now feeling fine in every way. I recommend your medicine to my friends who have similar troubles. You may publish this letter for the benefit of other women."—Mrs. WILL THOMAS, St. Paul, Neb.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from the roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

For forty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who now are free from suffering by its use.

turning of fate's wheel had brought them back to the husband who had caused that tragedy, when the wife who had been its innocent victim had long been dust.

I had never read them. I had never even untied the knots which my little mother's frail hands had fashioned in the strings which held them together. In the old days before my father came back into my life I had hated him so savagely that I could not bear to look at them. And since I had learned to forgive him and to love him I had felt somehow that they were not for my eyes until after my father had had an opportunity to read them over and select the ones he wished to give me.

My father put out his hands and picked one of the bundles up reverently.

"These cannot be—" he began—then sharply, "May I untie them?"

"Everything in here is yours, father, dear, to do with as you like," I returned.

He took off the strings, separated the letter and stared at the chirography of the address. Then he spoke wonderingly: "And she kept them through it all?"

Police Commissioner Kinger stated yesterday that he received from J. R. Lemme, salesman for the Co-operative Workers of America, a letter in which the writer discredits a complaint that he was addressed in abusive terms by Harry Buford, negro policeman attached to the South Side police station.

According to a letter received by Mr. Kinger from H. J. Pinkett, attorney, Buford was charged with questioning Lemme at Twenty-fourth street and Patrick avenue in a manner unbecoming an officer.

In his letter to the police commissioner Lemme expressed friendship for Buford.
