

TWIN STORIES

Japanese Twins See Boy and Monkey Perform.

The man balanced a ladder on his shoulder. The little boy climbed right up the ladder and hung from the top of it by his toes.

Every boy in the street came running to see them. Take came, too. The little boy, hanging from the top of the ladder, opened a fan and fanned himself! Then he climbed to his feet again and stood on one foot on the top of the ladder! Then he made a bow!

The mother brought out cakes and tea. Everybody had some. The man and the boy thanked her. They made the monkey thank her, too. He got down on his knees and bowed clear to the ground.

When they had eaten the cakes and drank the tea the man and the boy said, "Sayonara, Sayonara." The monkey jumped on the man's shoulder and away they went down the street, with all the boys following after.

Taro and Take did not go with them, because their mother said, "It is almost time for supper." They watched the others from their gate. Then they came back and sat down on the top step of the porch.

"I think you've had just as good a time on your birthday as I had on mine," Take said.

"Better," said Taro.

"Taro, we are getting very old, aren't we?" Take went on.

"Yes," said Taro, "we are 6 now."

"What are you going to be when you are 7 or 8 years old and grown up?" asked Take.

"Well," said Taro, "I'm not sure, but I think I shall be either a general or a juggler," Taro said. "What are you going to be?"

"There's only one thing I can grow to be," said Take. "If I am very, very good, maybe I'll grow to be a mother-in-law sometime."

Just then they heard their mother's voice calling them to supper. It was very late for supper—it was really almost night.

The shadows in the little garden were growing long. The birds were chirping sleepily to each other in the wistaria vine. The iris flowers were nodding their purple heads to the little goldfish in the pond. Every thing was quiet and still.

The twins stopped to look at the little garden before they went in to their supper.

"Good night, pretty world," they said, and waved their hands.

I'M THE GUY!

I'M THE GUY who tries to sell goods for his firm by knocking his competitors and their lines.

It's too much trouble thinking up good arguments for my own stuff and it's easier to tell the dealers where they get off buying from the other fellow.

It doesn't necessarily matter whether all my knocks are justified or not. The point is to get them across and make the dealer think he's stung if he buys from anyone but me. The other fellows on the road may be trying to make good

What Do You Know?

(Here's a chance to make your wit worth money. Each day The Bee will publish a series of questions, prepared by Superintendent J. H. Beveridge of the public schools. They cover things which you should know. The first complete list of correct answers received will be rewarded by $1. The answers and the name of the winner will be published on the day indicated below. Be sure to give your views and address in full. Address "Question Editor," Omaha Bee.)

By J. H. BEVERIDGE.

1. How many electoral votes did William Jennings Bryan receive in 1896? A total of 447 were cast.

2. From what college did he graduate?

3. In what capacity did he serve during the Spanish-American war?

4. Of what paper is he the editor?

5. In what years was he a candidate for president of the United States?

(Answers Published Wednesday.)

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWERS.

1. What was known as the "fever of '92"? Anxiety to reach gold fields of California.

2. What was "Clinton's Folly"? The Erie canal.

3. From what state does the famous Bedford stone come? Indiana.

4. Who was the first man to successfully send messages over the magnetic telegraph? Samuel Morse.

5. Who is author of "The Victory Bell"? Alfred Noyes.

Winner: No correct answer received.

and keep their jobs but I've only my own to think about. And if I can queer them I figure it makes it that much better for me.

Of course it makes me sore if THEY knock ME or my goods, but that's because it hurts ME. They may feel the same about it when they hear I've been hammering them, but that's their worry, not mine.

And wouldn't I be a fool to let any dealer think anybody was honest but me? The other fellows on the road may be trying to make good

WHY?—

Do Hailstorms Occur?

(Copyright, 1920, by the Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

The starting point of a hailstorm is a layer of air, laden with water-vapor, which passes rapidly through varying degrees of temperature which first freezes the particles of water, then melt them and re-freeze them, adding other particles as the journey continues. These "hailstones," in falling, are sometimes carried below the central part of the storm which gave birth to them, through successive layers of rain or snow, which accounts for the fact that the resultant "stones" is formed of a number of distinct coatings, like the skins of an onion.

It frequently happens that a considerable quantity of this frozen vapor is whirled by the action of the storm into the center or vortex of the tornado. Then, when the force ceases abruptly or the mass of the particles becomes too heavy to be supported by the wind, they fall to the earth in an almost solid mass, like a frozen cloudburst, thus accounting for the great amount of hail which often falls within a limited space in a small period of time.

The connection between hailstorms and thunderstorms is because of the rapidly shifting degrees of temperature which accompany the latter—a fact which also explains why hailstorms usually occur in the spring or summer, when the majority of thunderstorms take place.
