

G. O. P. NOMINEES DECIDE ON PLAN FOR CAMPAIGN

Based "On Appeal to Restore Party Government as Constitutional Substitute for Personal Rule."

Washington, June 30.—The republican presidential campaign will be based "on appeal to restore party government as a constitutional substitute for personal government," Senator Harding, the party presidential candidate announced today after a conference with Calvin Coolidge, his running mate, and National Chairman Will H. Hays.

At the same time Governor Coolidge, in a formal statement, declared that there must be "a return of public opinion toward a self-control by the people, toward a great and overwhelming desire to observe the law."

Senator Harding's statement said: "Governor Coolidge breakfasted with me this morning and we have agreed that we will base the campaign on an appeal to restore party government as a constitutional substitute for personal government."

"The governor and I have each served as lieutenant governor in our states and we both have learned from experience how possible it is for a second official in a state to be a helpful part in a party administration. I think the vice president should be more than a mere substitute in waiting. In re-establishing co-ordination between the executive office and the senate the vice president can and ought to play a big part, and I have been telling Governor Coolidge how much I wish him to be not only a participant in the campaign, but how much I wish him to be a helpful part of a republican administration. The country needs the counsel and becoming participation in the government of such men as Governor Coolidge."

Governor Coolidge's statement follows: "I am here to co-operate with my associate. Many men have many remedies. The best remedy is the observance of the constitution and the laws, not their enforcement, mind you. I am not now speaking of that. Of course, the government will enforce the laws. That is far from enough. There must be a return of public opinion toward a self-control by the people, toward a great and overwhelming desire to observe the law. When that is done the other problems will fall away, there will be peace, prosperity and progress."

Lennox Dealers Are Found Guilty of Selling Rotten Eggs

Vermilion, Neb., June 30.—It cost the two members of a mercantile firm in Lennox $133.04 a few days ago to sell rotten eggs. On complaint of Inspector Briggs of the State Food department, each member of the firm was taken to the county seat at Canton and there fined the limit for a first conviction of violation of the state good egg law. In addition to the fine, each member was assessed costs of $16.52, making the total paid by the firm, $133.04. The evidence showed that the firm had been buying and selling eggs without candling on the imperfect. Other dealers, one at Estelline, Colome, Winner and Carthage, were successful in presenting during the last week for failure to properly candle eggs when bought. Another dealer at Carthage and one at Winner paid fines for failure to secure licenses to deal in eggs. A butcher at Garden City was taken before a justice at Clark and fined on complaint of Inspector Puder for conducting an insanitary market.

Good Rain at Fremont

Fremont, Neb., June 30.—(Special)—Escaping the violence of the storm that swept eastern Nebraska and the Platte valley Monday night, Fremont and vicinity early Tuesday morning had a gentle, but persistent fall of rain that totaled .35 inches, and greatly improved the crop outlook. No high winds accompanied the storm.

Before her the future is as baffling as the flower at which she is so earnestly gazing. Norma decides in "Yes or No," the picture at the Strand theater next week.

Blanche Sweet in "The Deadlier Sex" is the feature picture at the Empress the rest of the week. Blanche is Mary Willard, the owner of a railroad left her by her father. It's the old story of a girl who bucked Wall Street to save her father's property from an ignominious end as part of another system, but it is somewhat different in that Blanche kidnaps the wild railroad who is trying to absorb the property and teaches him, a few things, next to nature in the great North woods. When his money swells him not, he is in a sore plight indeed. Unaware that Blanche is his jailer, he falls in love with her and this creates more trouble when they both return to civilization. She is supported by Mahlon Hamilton.

Essex Wins Mileage Honors in Dealers' Reliability Contest
Essex performance during the national Essex week, seems to be uniformly good, according to numerous reports of gasoline mileage, hill climbs, and record runs being reported by the factory and dealers to Guy L. Smith, local distributor. A recent telegram brings news that the Essex won the dealers' reliability run at Sacramento, California, making the high average for gasoline, oil and water. The distance traveled was 261 miles over the Sierra Nevada mountains. The Essex averaged 24 1/2 miles to the gallon of gasoline. This was the highest gasoline mileage made by any of the cars, regardless of class, size or price. There were 19 other entries. The Essex' has made two creditable records in Omaha up to the present time in trying for gasoline mileage records. Last Monday, the Essex made 30 1/2 miles on a gallon of gasoline and on Tuesday, Monday's record was beaten by a record of 31.9 miles. Guy L. Smith expects to bring this record up to 33 miles per gallon before the week is over. High winds have made conditions unfavorable on both the Monday and Tuesday runs.

Postal Motor Trucks May Deliver Bundles From Stores in Omaha

Postal delivery of parcels from department stores to homes in Omaha may be established in the near future, Thomas A. Mallalieu, chief of the Postoffice department, predicted yesterday at a luncheon in his honor at the Chamber of Commerce. According to Mr. Mallalieu, the plan is being tried out with considerable success in St. Paul. A delivery charge is made on each package. He believes that if the system continues to prove profitable it will be installed in all large cities. The extension of the motorized mail service in Omaha was discussed at the luncheon. Mr. Mallalieu had spent three days studying the situation in Omaha.

AT THE THEATERS

THE new show today at the Empress is composed of two feature acts which will stand high in the estimation of the theatergoers. The first is "The Curio Shop," a musical comedy by Emil DeForest, with a lovely of beautiful girls. This act is a whirlwind of pretty girls, beautiful costumes and witty sayings. The second feature act is the Anderson Trio, who will present a series of dances. These young people are artists, and their dances mark them as some of the best on the stage. Rinaldo Brothers, physical masterpieces, will offer a Roman art posing act. May and Hill, a sweet young miss and a pleasing chap, will offer a singing, talking and dancing act. This team knows how to put its act across. None of the mental telepathy and mind-reading acts hitherto presented will compare favorably with "Concentration," which is being presented this week by George Lovett and his "mystery band" at the Orpheum this week. This melodrama, however, is but one feature of the performance. During intervals Mrs. Zena Keefe answers the questions you have fixed your mind upon. Patrons are reminded that the three vaudeville shows presented daily the one which offers the best selection of seats starts at 6:40. The first show starts at 2:40 and the last at 9 in the evening, while the picture "The Woman God Sent" is shown at 8:15, 8:45, 10 and 10:15.

SAYS LEAP YEAR IS RESPONSIBLE FOR LICENSE INCREASE

Clerk Stubbendorf States Girls Are Popping Question in Many Matches.

"It's leap year!" That is the explanation offered by Marriage License Clerk Stubbendorf for an increase of nearly 40 per cent in the number of marriage licenses issued in Douglas county during the first six months of this year over the same period last year. "It's leap year and the ladies are taking advantage of it," he declared enthusiastically. "I'm for 'em. Judging by the folks that come in here, of both sexes, the fair sex classifies far higher than the other. I think the girls are better fitted mentally and by intuition to pick out the proper men to pay the rent and grocery bills than the men are to pick the girls."

"Yes, sir, they've got the vote now and they're not going to be bound down by the ancient and obsolete custom which compels them to wait till some man asks them to marry him. That is a relic of the days of women's slavery. It's foolish and out-of-date."

"Do any of them admit that they popped the question?" he was asked. "Some of them have done so, but I'm not the guy to give 'em away. Some of the men have admitted it, too, and they seemed tickled to death over it. Said they didn't have the nerve to propose, although they wanted to."

The figures are astonishing. In the first six months of 1919 there were 1,377 marriage licenses issued in this county. In the first six months of this year there were 1,934 licenses issued, an increase of 557. This month also broke all records. At the close of business last night 394 licenses had been issued during June, with one day still to go. This is exactly the same number as were issued during the entire month of December, 1919, which was the record month up to that time.

In the Douglas county divorce court there has been an increase, too. In the first six months of last year 476 divorce decrees were granted. This year in the corresponding period 587 decrees of divorce were passed out.

I'M THE GUY!

I'M THE GUY who invites you home to "take pot luck" with him without first consulting his wife. I tell you "she won't mind—she'll be tickled to have you" even when I know she may treat you as if you had the plague and will raise the roof after you've gone. I don't see why I should ask her permission or even let her know I'm bringing a guest. She might say, "No. And I want you, and that ought to be enough. If she's all flustered because it happens to be a "pick up" meal, or because she didn't have time to plan the kind of a dinner SHE'd like to have, that doesn't annoy ME. She ought to be provident enough to always have plenty in the ice box. And if she's cranky toward you, you shouldn't mind. You're not HER guest, you're MINE. And I enjoy your visit if she doesn't. Of course, it may be unpleasant for you. You may feel embarrassed. But you shouldn't. I don't!"

For Boys and Girls

Our Dogs
The Clan of North America

Slough Bloodhounds. FLORA BERRILL. We bloodhounds have been conspicuous figures in history. We used to be known as "St. Huberts" and William the Conqueror was the first to take them into England. Nearly all we American bloodhounds are of the English strain. Perhaps it was the description of us in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" which caused many people to think of us as bloodthirsty. We are, indeed, the great man-hunting dogs, but we are not ferocious, nor do we gobble people up. It is our powerful sense of smell and our special talent for keeping to the one trail which makes us such good detectives. First we were used to run down slaves before the civil war. Slaves were continually running away, and the bloodhound proved to be the quickest and surest means by which to discover their hiding places. Now we frequently help to locate escaped convicts. Of course, we must be kept near the prison, as we cannot be expected to take up a scent many hours old. In crowded places, too, our efficiency is less, because there a scent is quickly confused and lost. Given the open country, however, and a shorter interval of time since the escape, and no human being can escape us. There is one other search to which we sometimes lend aid, and that is the finding of little children who become lost. The frightened parents and the mystified police alike can trust us. They realize that our name is misleading, and that we are really gentle creatures who want to justify the confidence that is placed in us and to be a help to mankind.

HOLDING A HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

How Mother Graham Swiftly Changed Her Attitude. I could not help a quick, furtive glance at my mother-in-law when Dicky so nonchalantly announced his responsibility for Major Grantland's idea of matching the bouquets he was providing for the women of the wedding party to samples of their gowns. I knew better than to let her see me looking at her, nor did I care to witness her discomfiture. She had been so didactic in her disapproval of both the major and his scheme that at Dicky's announcement her dignity collapsed as if it had been a child's inflated toy balloon pricked with a pin.

But if anyone fancied that her spirit remained crushed for more than a few seconds that person is not familiar with the residence of Dicky's doughty parent. Her tone was actually triumphant as she addressed me. "I told you Grantland never would have thought of that all by himself," she said, and her air subtly conveyed the thought that she really approved the idea, but doubted the young officer's originality in the matter.

"I know you did, mother," I said demurely. I saw Dicky glance at me quickly, shrewdly, caught a twinkle in his eye, and knew that by an intonation with which he was familiar I had succeeded in giving him an inkling of the true state of affairs. "I'll warrant you did, mother," he laughed, then parried her possible answer by turning to me. Dicky Is Complacent. "Grantland is rather a novice when it comes to the eternal feminine, and what will please her," he said complacently. "But he's a good fellow if he is rather a stick. So I didn't register any kick when Alf told me that Grantland wanted to provide the wedding bouquets, all except Leila's, of course. Alf is driving his florist crazy trying to get just the kind and shade of blossoms he wants for her to carry. You'd think he was worth a billion at least in the line of being a more or less struggling art editor. But then he probably won't get married again for two or three years at least, so I guess it won't break him."

TWIN STORIES

BY LUCY FITCH PERKINS

Irish Twins Have Tea. "Sure, this is a fine day for me, altogether," said Grannie Malone, as she got out her bit of flour to make the cake. "I can wait for the letter from myself, the way I know they're in health, and have not forgotten their old mother. Troth, we'll have a bit of a feast over it now," she said to the twins. "While I'm showing the caken together do you get some potatoes from the bag, Eileen, and put them down in the ashes, and you, Larry, stir up the fire a bit, and keep the kettle full. Sure, 'tis singing away like a bird this instant minute! Put some water in it, avic, and then shut up the hens for me."

Eileen ran to the potato bag in the corner and took out four good-sized potatoes. "There's but three of us," she said to herself, "but Larry will surely be wanting two himself. I'll get down on her knees and bury the potatoes in the burning peat. Then she took a little broom that stood near by, and tidied up the hearth. Larry took the kettle to the well for more water. He slopped a good deal of it as he came back. It made great spots of mud, for there was no wooden floor—only hard earth with flat stones set in it. "Arrah now, Larry, you do be slopping things up the equal of a thunderstorm," Eileen said to him. "Never you mind that, now Larry," said Grannie Malone. "It might have been that the kettle leaked itself, and no fault of your own at all. Sure, a bit of water here or there does nobody any harm."

She hung the teakettle on the hook over the fire again. Then she brought the caken and put it into a small iron baking kettle and put a cover over it. She put turf on top of the cover. "I will not be long until it's baked," said Grannie, "and you can be watching it, Eileen, while I set out the table."

She pulled a little wooden table out before the fire, put three plates and three cups on it, some salt, and the jug of milk. Meanwhile Larry was out trying to shut the hens into the little shelter beside the house.

WHY?

Do Rings Appear Around the Planet Saturn?

This question, which has puzzled astronomers since the earliest days of the observations of the heavens, was finally solved by Clerk Maxwell, who showed that the only possible explanation of the matter was that the "rings" consist of an immense number of tiny satellites or moons, each of which is continually whirling around in its orbit, held in place by the attraction of Saturn itself. This theory explains the fact that the two outer rings are brighter than the third or "crisp" ring on the ground, that they consist of a larger number of satellites, more closely grouped. Because a year on Saturn is the equivalent of 29 1/2 earth years these rings disappear entirely every seven and one-third years, being then edgewise to the earth and invisible even to a glass as powerful as that of the great Lick telescope. Prof. Barnard's measurements give the outer diameter of the outside ring as 172,310 miles, while the inner or dark ring is some 6,000 miles distant from the planet itself. On the other hand, the rings are less than 50 miles in thickness, which accounts for their apparent disappearance when their edge is turned toward the earth.
