

MILADY MISSES PERFECTION IF NOT WELL SHOD

French Shoe King Says American Women Have Most Beautiful Feet—Drops a Few Hints.

Paris, July 9.—The shoe is the foundation of a woman's appearance. If it does not fit well her health is ruined; if it does not look well her appearance is spoiled.

As a matter of fact, they should first be well shod, and the rest of the wardrobe will take care of itself.

American women have the best looking feet in the world. They also understand the value of the low-heeled shoe, but often choose a too-masculine shape.

The low-heeled shoe can be just as feminine as a high-heeled one, provided it is well built. No matter how low the heel, the shifter should fit snugly.

For walking the low-heeled shoe is the only type permissible. For afternoon wear, graceful pumps of Colonial ties are the best.

For evening wear there is no limit to the height of heels or the fancy of materials. Silks and velvets, brocades, precious stones, feathers—everything is acceptable, provided the slipper harmonizes with the gown.

For use around the house a sandal that holds the feet in shape, yet yields sufficiently to allow it to rest, is ideal.

Only Woman Clown in Circus World Is With John Robinson Shows

"Peanuts, mister?" "Lemonade—last chance before the big show starts. Popcorn—crackerjack?"

A small of sawdust, a gale of laughter spreading through the arena at the antics of the clown, the shrill cries of the vendors, and John Robinson's Circus performances will open in Omaha.

Prominent among the displays are the famous Nelson Family in a series of new and daring feats in the air and on the ground.

The clowns number 50 and they are headed by Harry La Paro, Ab Johnston, Danny Ryan and Rosa DeMarr, the only woman clown.

HOLDING A HUSBAND Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

Dicky rushed into my room for the 11th time, demanding the whereabouts of which I really was supposed to know nothing, as he has a room all to himself, with plenty of closet and bureau room.

For the 11th time I scolded my voice to please myself, though my nerves were jumping. I had grimly resolved upon the morning of this last day before our journey south that I would not lose my self-control no matter what happened.

I had prepared myself for almost any eventuality. But sometimes it is the long hacking which is more effectual in breaking a stick than a sharp blow.

"What's this I hear about dad getting you a stateroom all to yourself?" Of course, the words were perfectly natural and inoffensive.

"Your hearing is perfectly correct. I got me one. That leaves your mother one, and Maj. Grantland secured one for Mrs. Durkee."

Dicky looked at me queerly. "Ye-es, so I've understood," he said dryly, and I wondered with a terrified little quail whether he, too, suspected that the young officer had obtained the drawing room for men, and that he had passed it on to Mrs. Durkee only upon my refusal of it.

"While Ed—ith—" To Dicky's jealousy, unreasoning because of my own conduct and that of Maj. Grantland himself I had long been used, and I prepared myself.

didn't come home, at all, and we already so late. "Well, then," Larry answered, "we must just abide here until it's dark, and creep by, the best way we can."

"If the dog comes after us," said Larry, "I'll drop a stone on him, out of a tree, just the way the good son did in the story, and kill him dead."

"But there's never a tree anywhere about," said Eileen. "Sure, that's no plan at all!"

"That's a true word," said Larry, "but the moon grew brighter and brighter in the sky, and the flames of the Tinker's fire glowed more and more red, as the night came on."

"Sure, it isn't going to get real dark at all!" whispered Larry. (Rights reserved by Houghton Mifflin Co.)

I'M THE GUY!

I'M THE GUY who is ashamed to introduce his "poor relations." I've done pretty well myself and have a number of well-to-do acquaintances and I like to keep up a "front."

If I introduce to them members of my family who don't dress in style, or know a lot of people my friends know, or who are holding down jobs that are not as dignified as mine, or whose speech isn't as grammatical as mine, it might lower me in my friends' estimation.

They haven't my brains, or haven't had my "luck" is not my fault, but is their misfortune, and I don't see why I should allow it to interfere unpleasantly with my social ambitions.

If they had more money than I have, or better social position, it wouldn't be different. Then it would be to my advantage to get in with them and show them off at every opportunity, for that would boost my stock.

But they haven't, so the best thing for me to do is to discourage any attempt on their part to be friendly with me.

WHY?—Do Some People Freckle Easily? (Copyright 1920, By The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

The little brown spots on the skin which we call "freckles" are caused by the action of the sun's rays upon cells near the surface of the body, producing a yellowish-brown coloring substance or pigment which sometimes remains for a short time only and sometimes continues for years.

The appearance of freckles up on the shoulders, generally noted upon those who have worn scanty bathing suits in the summer, is due to the fact that this portion of the body is usually covered and protected and is therefore quit apt to be tender.
