

COOLEY DENIES TELLING YOUTHS HE FIXED JUDGE

Police Court Attorney Declares
Jocular Remark Was Misconstrued—Fitzgerald Not to Investigate Affair.

Julius Cooley, police court attorney, yesterday denied charges made Tuesday that he had told two youthful speeders that he had "fixed it with the judge."

He said the two boys, Robert Blake and Thomas Sutphen, 16-year-old high school juniors, asked him to act as their attorney when they were arrested Monday night.

Deposited Bond, He Says.
Cooley declared he deposited $10 each for their appearance in court the next morning and that when they went to him before court opened Tuesday morning one of the lads told him his father had already arranged with another man to defend them.

They offered to pay Cooley for his trouble, however, he said.

After the trial, when Judge Fitzgerald had fined Blake $5 and discharged Sutphen, Cooley said he jokingly remarked to one of the boys that his father evidently had not fixed things very well.

No Probe Expected.
"That must have been the remark which was misunderstood," Cooley stated. "I did not tell the boys I had fixed it with the judge."

Cooley spoke in the highest terms of Police Judge Fitzgerald, who, he said, had assured him there was to be no probe of the alleged remark.

Cooley was charged with having made in the court room yesterday.

The New York Times.
NEW YORK TIMES
Chicago Tribune—Omaha Bee Leased Wire.
New York, July 14.—Speculative interest in stocks slowed down today, both in volume of business and in the number of issues handled, as compared with the preceding sessions. In fact, except for a quickening of the trading pace in the first hour when certain groups of industrial shares were under pressure, and again near the close under short covering transactions, the market acted much as it did during the monotonous days late in June.

Professional traders practically dominated business and results were more marked in the market than the buying side, although the irregular price list at the close told little of the real influences at work. Automobile and rubber issues were shot at by bears, to the accompaniment of rumors about possible price reductions in tires produced by the motor and allied concerns, which sounded as though manufactured for the occasion.

In case of motor vehicles, at least, it is difficult to see how a substantial demand is coinciding with a growing supply of tires. The street trading all day at 8 per cent. The street trading all day at 8 per cent. The street trading all day at 8 per cent.
