City and store detectives claim the plan, whereby it was possible to rob stores of several thousand dollars worth of merchandise nearly every night, was the most cleverly devised and executed of any in the history of Omaha.

Those arrested were W. A. Swan, chieft operator for the A. D. T. Co.: Thomas B. Robel, Henshaw hotel, and Bernard Dolan, Millard hotel; also employes of the A. D. T. Co.; Guy Huff and Joseph Grady, employed in a Douglas street theater; Sam Frohm, merchant, 3225 California street; Tony Stuffler, metchant, 330 North Twenty-fifth street, and F. J. Welch, merchant, 336 North Twenty-fifth street.

How System Worked.

The plan, detectives say, was for the A. D. T. employes, who had keys to the large downtown stores, to unlock the buildings and be on the lookout for city police while their accomplices merchandise from the store.

Private detectives for the Brandeis and Burgess-Nash stores have been working on the case nearly six months, they said, but were unable to secure sufficient evidence to warrant any arrests earlier than yesterday.
