Women are the real rulers of the Tripoli desert, for instead of the women, as in Turkey, the men go veiled.

Orpheum Star's Dreams Come True

Just a year ago smiling, pink-cheeked Beth Beri of Los Angeles had a hunch. Now sometimes hunches come true and sometimes they don't but Beth's usually have a way of turning out in a happy manner so she decided to await developments. The result is that today Beth is delighting Orpheum theater goers with her clever dances while a year ago she did not think she had the slightest chance of becoming an actress. Of course, the realization of the dreams seemed very far away.

Beth attended grade and high schools in Los Angeles and during her high school years she studied the muse, Terpsichore. And then when a sweet girl graduate, her golden opportunity knocked and was bidden to enter immediately.

Don'ts on Retaining Beauty

Don't write or read on a moving train, as this impairs even the most beautiful eyes. Don't read or write facing a light. Don't lie down for rest on large pillows, which cause round shoulders and double chins.

Don't allow the skin to become dry, the condition which invariably precedes wrinkles. Don't moisten the lips with the tongue to make them red, as it will cause them to roughen and chape.

Don't dwell upon unpleasant things. Dismiss them unless you would add apparent age. Don't stand with one hip higher than the other.

Don't open the eyes upon a bright light. Don't neglect to bathe the feet before retiring. Don't stand with the shoulders forward.

Story of Clock That Strikes Thirteen

There is one clock in England that strikes 13, and it is said to be the only one in the country with such a garrulous characteristic; as a matter of fact, when it strikes 13, it means one, and therein lies the story of its construction. The old clock tells time on the turret gateway of Worsley hall, near Manchester, and long ago it used to strike the hours after the conventional manner of clocks. When it had struck 12, it began again with one. But it so happened that the duke of Bridgewater, who was once master of Worsley hall, became displeased with a visible tardiness of the workmen about his estate in resuming their labors after the noon rest; and when he reminded them that 1 o'clock was the time to begin their afternoon work, the laborers agreed with him, but explained that exact promptness was difficult because they did not hear the clock strike one. "Very good!" said the duke in effect, "you shall hear the clock strike." So he called in the clock-maker and had him exercise his skill to effect a radical change in the striking mechanism of the clock. After that the workmen heard the clock strike 12 (which had always been easy) and stopped work; and an hour later they heard it strike 13 (which was one stroke easier) and had no excuse for not resuming their labors. And although the face of the clock on Worsley hall has been changed since the duke's time, the works are the same, and at 1 o'clock, says a writer in The Youth's Companion (Boston), it still strikes 13.—Christian Science Monitor.

Carter Lake

More than 600 attended the first performance of the Carter Lake vaudeville troupe Thursday evening at the picture house. The program was given by Mrs. S. K. Howell, the Misses Iola Chasson, Agnes Britton, Helen Howell, Munro, Adeline Maelstrom, Grace Mahaffey and Messrs. Roland Caldwell, William Kovak, Frank Lewis and Harry Mallo. Thirty-five attended the Tri-City Dental society dinner at the club house Thursday evening. Among others who entertained Thursday evening were D. D. Jones, who had 8 guests; E. K. Hathaway, 7; E. L. Brown, 6, and F. P. Mason, 4.

Mrs. R. M. Pratt entertained 12 guests at luncheon Friday. Mrs. L. E. Henney and Mrs. Guy Furness gave a bridge luncheon Friday at the Henney cottage in honor of Mrs. W. R. Bowes of Park Ridge, Ill., who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Frank Tuttle. Covers were placed for 12. Miss D'Iona Mustain entertained 15 guests Friday evening at a swimming party, followed by a picnic supper at the Mustain cottage.

What's What

The young woman in the illustration is beginning her dinner, blithely unconscious that by not waiting until all are served she is violating one of the elementary rules in the code of table manners. Satirists have dwelt upon the fact that social hospitality is customarily extended to those who are in no actual need of food. No one is supposed to come to a formal dinner in a state of starvation. Haste in eating is to be avoided as any other appearance of greediness. The general rule is to wait until the hostess begins to partake of the first course, and to follow her lead in all of the ensuing courses. Copyright, 1920, by Public Ledger Co.
